WITH THE bulldozer looming in the background, this youngster enjoys a new found beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue. City workers spent part of last week on an annual project to push the sand back up to the parking lot. During the year, the sand underneath the parking lot begins to shift toward the ocean and each year the city has to push it back up again. The project was completed early this week, said the public works department. (Michael R. Gardner photo)

Library cuts staff; may close Sundays

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

IN ANTICIPATION of cutbacks of nearly $130,000 in county funds, the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees has laid off the full-time children's librarian and may close on Sundays, which would mean more staff reductions.

Trustees are expected to receive a bleak budget projection from Library Director Peg Richter when they meet at 4 p.m. May 25 at Carmel City Hall.

Ms. Richter said the layoff of the $25,000-per-year children's librarian, possible closing on Sundays and more staff cuts are part of a reorganization plan designed to save money with a minimum loss of services.

Trustees decided to lay off the children's librarian in executive session at their monthly meeting in April but the decision was not expected to be made public until the May 25 session. However, the Pine Cone/Outlook learned of the layoff and other measures in advance of that meeting.

Although trustees have blamed the loss of county funds for the layoff and possible Sunday closing, the board of supervisors has not decided how much money it would continue to reimburse the library for providing services to non-city resident patrons.

A county consultant has recommended that supervisors cut reimbursements drastically, which would mean a loss of nearly $130,000 from the Harrison Memorial Library operating budget of $429,000.

Supervisors have rejected some recommendations in the consultant's report but have indicated the county can no longer afford the full reimbursements.

County Administrator Richard Andrews is expected to meet with city managers and formulate a new proposal, which would probably not be on the supervisors' agenda until June 8 or June 15, said Steve Slade, administrative assistant for Fifth District Supervisor William Peters.

The contract between the county and city libraries expires June 30 and Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel have indicated that the libraries will begin to charge fees to non-

C.S.E.A. endorsed Sillman

Dear Editor:

As I read your nice article concerning the Municipal Court Judges' race between Judge William Burleigh and Steve Sillman, I found one important omission. The Carmel Safety Employees Association is a strong supporter of Steve Sillman, but we were not listed among the other fourteen supportive law enforcement agencies.

Before the Carmel Safety Employees Association made any endorsement in this election, we carefully and thoroughly examined both candidates, their records, qualifications and performances over the last few years. In fact, both candidates appeared before our general membership on February 19, 1982 and presented their individual platforms. After comparing all these factors, our association unanimously endorsed Steve Sillman.

Supports Judge Burleigh

Dear Editor:

As a home delivery subscriber of the Pine Cone, I read with interest your recent article concerning the challenge for office by Mr. Sillman of our present Municipal Court Judge William B. Burleigh. I do not know Mr. Sillman, the challenger, but I have had a distinct privilege of meeting and getting to know Judge Burleigh in an important and afterwards continuation of his daily job.

Judge Burleigh has been, and is, a Boy Scouts of America counselor for three of the required and therefore crucial merit badges a young man must study and pass to become an Eagle Scout and in turn one of our beloved country's best citizens.

These merit badges all relate to our country's history and laws and are as follows: Citizenship in the Community (the town or city where you reside i.e. Carmel, Monterey, Seaside). Next Citizenship in the Nation (our country's history as concerns the Constitution). The third is Citizenship in the World. Judge Burleigh even visits the Scout's own home if this is more convenient for the Scout and this is right after a full day of having to work with people who through their own fault in many cases, have involved themselves with the law (i.e. driving under the influence or theft).

Judge Burleigh knows how very important his volunteer job of a merit badge counselor is because as he has said many times that boys who have been involved in Scouting are seldom if ever encountered in his courtroom. I am not qualified to know of any implied waste of funds at the Municipal Court, but I doubt there is any, as Judge Burleigh does not waste time in his off hours and this to me is indicative of his outstanding character.

Our Troop, the Lucky Troop 3 of Carmel, consists of 19 boys ranging in age from 11 to 18 1/2 in age and all hold Judge Burleigh in great respect and value his warm and always available interest and friendship.

Retain incumbent judges

Dear Editor:

Challenges made against six of our judges (and a threatened challenge against a seventh) in the upcoming election on June 8 was an unjust attempted indictment of the judiciary of Monterey County. All of the challenges have been withdrawn except for the election contests against three incumbents.

We are fortunate in the quality of our courts in Monterey County. All of our judges are experienced, conscientious, work long hours and most important of all, have integrity. They are trial judges and cannot be held responsible for the binding decisions of appellate courts which legislate, make the question of guilt or innocence seem irrelevant and distort constitutional provisions which result in violation of ordinary standards of decency.

When judges undertake a judicial career they give up a law practice it takes years to establish and unless there is just cause for removal from office, they should have the support of the voters. If defeated, it means starting over, which is awesome for a judge with a wife and family.

For those who use the old saw "if the fire is too hot get out of the kitchen," they should be informed that a judgeship is a non-partisan office, a judge has to carry a full work load during an election campaign and has restrictions that others do not have.

Judge William Burleigh, Judge Fred Novinger and Judge Raymond Simmons are incumbents still being challenged on June 8th. They deserve the support of the voters. Please vote.

Save the fireworks

Dear Editor:

After attending the July 4th celebrations on Carmel beach last year, I should like to offer an alternative view to the one expressed on page A-3 of the Carmel Pine Cone last week.

As the mother of a young English family spending a few pleasant years on the Monterey Peninsula, my husband and I took our children and some young English friends to the beach last year, not knowing what to expect. We came away having spent one of the most delightful evenings we have spent here in America.

It was perfect, a warm evening with the bay calm and peaceful under the summer sky. Though we had quite a way to walk from parking our car and had brought no picnic, the atmosphere of the gathering soon took hold of us, and before long we too had made our little fire and were gathered around sharing an experience we shall always treasure. People, though many in number, were friendly and courteous and we saw no vandalism.

Fires were kept under control and everyone kept an eye on each others' children. As darkness fell the sight of the glimmering fires, the music and the waves reinforced the sense of delight and a special magic.

We are, of course, well aware of the drawbacks. Fireworks if unsupervised are dangerous, many cars jamming the roads are a nuisance, litter is unsightly. But with a little organization could not these problems be reduced? Perhaps an official display rather than indiscriminate fireworks, special groups of students or other young people to check litter, and unruly fires throughout the evening, special parking areas just for the evening.

Not easy I am sure, but so sad to end what is obviously a much loved tradition, which must surely give many families such as mine, so much pleasure, and in our case a unique memory to take home to England with us.

Council 'dead wrong'

Dear Editor:

The front page of the Pine Cone's edition of 13 May is bannered "Carmel seeks greater water allocation" and your reporter writes that "City Council members agree that Carmel has somehow come out on the short end of the water deal..." Your reporter correctly interprets the Council's opinion, but the council happens to be dead wrong in this matter. Carmel did not get any sort of a "short end": quite oppositely, we received a healthy bonus of water.

The allocation formula was argued for more than a year among representatives of Carmel, Del Rey Oaks, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Sand City, Seaside and Monterey County, chaired by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

During the lengthy discussions, it appeared that Carmel would be assigned a water use of 158 gallons a day (that's what we used in 1979, the adopted base year) for such residences that might be constructed between 1980 and 1999. At the very last minute, Pacific Grove's representatives proposed raising the unit consumption to 252 gpd for all municipalities and Carmel's representation needed about two-tenths of one second to decide to support that proposal because it gave us an increase of 59 percent for future residential growth.

Carmel was not "short changed." On a unit basis, we were allocated the same amount of water as all other municipalities were given for future growth. True, we are not in good shape today but without that bonus, we would be worse off than we are.

Carmel area coastal plan balances different interests

By ROBERT MISKIMON

AFTER YEARS of controversy and frustration, a giant step forward in coastal planning has been taken with the conditional certification of the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program.

Although the document approved by the Coastal Commission — subject to further negotiations with Monterey County on some relatively minor issues — isn't perfect, it seems to be a workable plan with something for just about everyone.

It does not go overboard either in the direction of environmentalists or developers, and seems to strike a balance that will be in the best interests of residents, visitors, property owners, and land developers.

The Odello Ranch south of the Carmel River, for instance, could be developed into 162 residential units with farmer's market and restaurant, under the LCP approved by both the county and the state. That is far less than the original density asked for by the Odellos, but more than advocated by the coastal staff in their recommendation that the land remain agricultural.

The Point Lobos Ranch — consisting of the Hudson and Riley properties — could be developed into the 240 visitor-serving units requested by the property owners. Here, the state agreed with the local land owners and allowed a greater number of units than the county had recommended by calling for a decrease of 120 units.

Total number of new residential units which could be developed in the unincorporated area south of the Carmel River under the state-approved LCP is between 644 and 821, which is more than the coastal staff recommended limit of 575 new residences. The final limit is closer to the number of units recommended in Monterey County's original LCP.

Differences between the state and county remain in such areas as public access to Malpas Creek and Yankee Point beaches, the continued use of Mission Ranch as a motel, and on other issues. But the fact that major portions of the LCP have been approved after years of controversy and dissension in the community is a positive sign.

Once the final touches are put on the document and it is completely approved by the Coastal Commission, permit authority will revert to Monterey County, and local citizens should again feel they are in the driver's seat with respect to coastal land use.

The Mayor's Report

A response to inquiries from Carmel citizens

By CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND

IN ANSWER to my request last week for "input" from you, I've had one suggestion about personnel (on inquiry, I learned that the suggested action has already been taken) a suggestion that the council tour the beach area at the end of Ocean Avenue to observe damage done by vandalism and over-use of bonfires, and a request for an interview. Let me emphasize that I will be in City Hall Monday and Wednesday afternoons from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. specifically to meet and talk with any of you who are "citizens" or who have business which directly affects our city.

How many of you realize that if Harrison Memorial Library doesn't have a contract for services with the county by the end of June, it will be impossible to serve non-city residents unless they purchase a card, which will cost $30 to $50?

Without money from the county, the library simply cannot afford to serve "outsiders." Other city libraries which have county funds withdrawn will not be so severely impacted because the percentage of county users is lower. At Harrison 50 percent of those who walk in are county, not city residents. Our head librarian has been told that Carmel will never receive as much money as in the past. Even if the county pays almost as much as last year the library can only "make ends meet" through the reduction of staff and services due to the steady rise of employee, utility and other costs.

Isn't this ridiculous?

Dear Editor:

Apparently some elected officials, some citizens, and some organizations on the Monterey Peninsula are devoid of fiscal responsibility in supporting construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

It is very difficult to understand how reasonable people would advocate an expenditure of $17 million of taxpayer's money to construct a segment of road 2.1 miles long that will go nowhere, when the traffic problem can be relieved for a small fraction of that sum.

The $17 million projected cost of construction is based on 1982 dollars. Since the road cannot be started for at least 10 years, the inflation factor could increase the cost to $304 million. Now, really! Is this not a ridiculous situation? No wonder our country is facing economic chaos.

What an unhappy prospect! Carmel has always supported and cherished its library and has been willing to serve all users if possible. You may be sure that the city council will give its closest attention to this matter.

Now I have a question for you! Former Mayor Andy Anderson teased me about not really being mayor because the "staff of office" hadn't been produced. Intrigued, I made inquiries and found there was not just one, but two such "staffs" in the vault — one beautiful wood, tipped in silver and the other tortoise shell with golden cap and ferrule.

Former Mayor Eben Whittlesey provided me with the correct name (and Mayor Franco of Del Rey Oaks with correct spelling) "El Baston de Mando" (accent over the "o" in Baston) or "the staff" (wand? baton?) of power.

Evidently, the staffs were presented to the mayor when a delegation from Carmel visited its sister city, Petra, on the Spanish island of Mallorca. I'm anxious to have more details on when, and how, they are used if anyone out there knows more about them. We in Carmel are not much for formality, but strong on pageantry and Spanish tradition and heritage and I think the staffs should be brought out of the vault more often than once a year for the official council photograph.

I look forward to hearing from you who have concerns about our city ...

CV intersection ruling to be appealed

By ROBERT MISKIMON

ATTORNEYS for Mrs. Virginia Merz of Carmel plan to appeal a Monterey Superior Court decision that a separate environmental impact report is not required before the Carmel Valley Road-Robinson Canyon Road intersection is reconstructed.

In the wake of a ruling last week by Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano that held in favor of Monterey County in the disputed intersection, Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson said an appeal to the U.S. District Court of Appeals in San Francisco is likely.

"I'm not certain that an appeal would hold up construction of the intersection because I don't think an appeals court would stop construction while the appeal is pending."

But county officials said they will go ahead with the $1 million intersection project anyway. Monterey County Civil Engineer Mo Orrett estimated that work could start by "late August or September," even if an appeal is filed.

Mrs. Merz, through attorneys Alexander Henson and Richard Rosenthal, challenged county approval of the intersection design without a separate EIR to examine potential growth-inducing aspects of the underpass.

The county, on the other hand, argued that the environmental aspects of the project had been fully addressed in the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan EIR. The project was approved after the county adopted a declaration of negative environmental impact.

Reconstruction of the intersection was proposed to handle increased traffic volumes generated by development at Carmel Valley Ranch.

Landmark Lands Co. of Oklahoma, developer of Carmel Valley Ranch, has agreed to pay for costs of reconstruction of the intersection.

Judge Agliano said in his notice of intended decision released last week that the EIR for the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan "discloses that the growth-inducing aspect of the plan, both in terms of the overall plan and traffic generation and circulation, were considered."

THE CONNECTION between the Carmel Valley Road-Robinson Canyon Road intersection and Carmel Valley Ranch becomes obvious in an aerial view of the Valley. The intersection to be reconstructed is visible to the extreme left, while the Carmel Valley Ranch development can be seen in the center foreground. The intersection is to be

The design of the reconfigured intersection "will not significantly increase the traffic capacity of the present intersection," Agliano found. "Its primary effect, rather, is the avoidance of vehicular conflict and the promotion of safety."

A negative environmental declaration for the intersection project represented "reasonable compliance" with state environmental quality laws, Judge Agliano ruled.

Furthermore, the project is consistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan despite the fact "the Monterey County Planning Commission, though belatedly, made a finding of consistency."

ATTORNEY Henson said he plans to base his appeal on "two analytical mistakes" in Judge Agliano's decision.

"He suggests that the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan EIR analyzed the impacts caused by the growth of Carmel Valley Ranch," Henson said. "The county didn't use that EIR. It's a legal nullity. They had to either consider an EIR or adopt a negative declaration; they adopted a negative declaration and did not consider any EIR."

The second basis for an appeal is Judge Agliano's decision that the intersection would not be growth-inducing beyond planned development at Carmel Valley Ranch, Henson said.

"He said testimony shows the intersection won't be growth-inducing. The legal test for an EIR is whether there is substantial evidence that it will be growth-inducing. And there is that evidence."

Deputy Monterey County Counsel Jose Ramos said the decision means "the county may now proceed to build the intersection. There is no legal impediment to the county proceeding."

"I'm not certain that an appeal would hold up construction of the intersection because I don't think an appeals court would stop construction while the appeal is pending."

Ramos said negotiations for purchase of right-of-way property from land owners in the area of the intersection must be completed, and bids must be received, before work can commence.

County Civil Engineer Mo Orrett said the county will probably advertise for bids on the project within one month, and "the work could start in late August or September."

"Even if there were an appeal, we'd be ready by then anyway."

Orrett said negotiations will resume with John Testa, who owns a key parcel needed for right-of-way, but he added: "We don't condemn property. We'll offer fair market value. We haven't been able to settle anything with him because of the lawsuit."

Consultant recommends legal 'second kitchens'

THE CITY should allow "second kitchens" to help ease the rental housing crunch, says a draft element of the Carmel General Plan.

The General Plan Advisory Committee will discuss the housing element when it meets at 7:30 tonight (May 20) at city hall.

The 15-year-old controversy over second kitchens apparently will end with the adoption of the general plan and Local Coastal Program, which will both include provisions to allow for the units on single family lots.

If the city does allow second kitchens through its LCP and general plan, Carmel evidently will meet requirements of a recent state Supreme Court ruling that jurisdictions must show a "good faith (and) diligent effort" toward providing housing for all income levels.

The draft element prepared by the general plan consultant, Earth Metrics, suggests that second kitchens would help meet the state housing requirements.

Presently, second kitchens are illegal in the city limits, but ordinances are expected to be introduced by December that would allow up to 550 such units, said Carmel Planning Director Bob Griggs.

Griggs said the city has discussed second kitchens for 15 years but they have been prohibited because they would increase density, and because Carmel is made up primarily of single family residential lots; second kitchens would allow numerous duplexes.

Earth Metrics suggests in the draft element that there now are "200 to 300" illegal second kitchens in Carmel.

Earth Metrics said second kitchens are usually converted garages, sheds, workshops and visitors' housing that have a bathroom, sink and hot plate.

"These secondary units provide one source of affordable housing for low and moderate income households, including the elderly. There may be as many as 150 senior citizens who reside illegally in these units with second food preparation areas, according to estimates of the Carmel Foundation," said Earth Metrics in its draft element.

Inquiries on school sale received

PRELIMINARY RESULTS from a $1,700 advertising campaign indicate some interest from the private sector in the lease or sale of Carmelo and Woods Schools and the Carmel Unified School District office site.

Supt. William Rand said the initial week of advertising in local and San Francisco Bay area newspapers has drawn between eight and 10 inquiries from "businesses, private schools and realtors."

Rand said the advertising will continue through early June for the lease of Carmelo School on Carmel Valley Road; sale of Woods School on Dolores and First Streets; and the district office site on Carmel Valley Road near the Middle school.

After it hears a progress report from Rand June 8, the board of education is expected to make several decisions that will affect an already-approved calendar for the sale and lease of the property.

Trustees are expected to discuss suggested terms of lease and use permit considerations,

Earth Metrics suggests that costs to bring the illegal second kitchen units in conformity with city building codes would be minimal. The consultant recommends that these property owners be allowed to apply for legal units.

The consultant's figures indicate 62 percent of the available housing in Carmel is owner-occupied and 38 percent is rented.

and to establish a schedule for the bidding process for Carmelo School at that meeting.

Meanwhile, a progress report on the sale of Woods School is not expected until June 29 — after an appraiser's estimate is complete and legal counsel reviews title restrictions.

At the June 29 session, the board is expected to adopt a timetable for the sale; to decide whether to sell it as one site or divide into smaller lots; and to make other cost estimates for capital outlay.

The board's calendar does not list a specific schedule for final action on the two schools because "it depends on the response of the potential leasees and buyers."

Although the lease of the district office site is advertised, the board does not plan to make any final decisions until the future of the middle school is decided, Rand said.

Rand said the budget and enrollment projections for the middle and high schools will be reviewed in October.

A portion of the middle school site has been suggested as a new location for the district office.

Fourteen percent of the units are not permanently occupied.

The vacancy rate is 4.1 percent, although that excludes the unoccupied "second homes" owned by those who live out of town and who use the units for vacation or retirement purposes.

Housing costs skyrocketed between the 1970 and 1980 census, said Earth Metrics.

The median selling price of a house was $156,000 in 1980 — an increase of 352 percent from 1970. The average price is estimated now at $180,000. The average monthly rent is $354.

In the draft element, Earth Metrics said the city should adopt the following policies:

- Allow second kitchens.
- Follow the provisions of a state law that allows certain types of mobile homes on single family lots.
- Help expand programs, such as the Carmel Foundation, that provide lower cost housing opportunities for the elderly.
- Encourage development of residential units in the commercial zones.
- Establish a priority list for rentals for the elderly, young people and those who work in Carmel.
- Reserve water capacity for construction of low and moderate income units.
- Consider building public parking areas on city-owned land with low and moderate income housing located above the facility.
- Discourage visitor-oriented units in residential zones.

When all of the elements are reviewed by the General Plan Advisory Committee, the proposed general plan will be discussed by the planning commission before going to the city council for final approval.

School board to plunge into budget talks May 25

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Trustees will plunge into discussions on the tentative 1982-83 budget May 25 and a big question is: can the district afford to give its employees a pay increase?

The board will meet at 7 p.m. in Room 2 at Carmel High School. The session will start 30 minutes earlier than the usual 7:30 p.m. meeting time because the board wants to recognize student achievements and adopt two resolutions before tackling the budget. (See related story, this issue.)

If the board agrees with a series of administrative budget cut proposals and sticks to its previously-announced position to keep $100,000 in reserves, trustees will have approximately $40,000 left over for program additions, new budget items or staff salary increases.

At its May 11 meeting, the board held a public hearing on a contract proposal from the classified staff asks for a 7.5 percent pay increase and another 7.5 percent hike to bring them up to parity with classified staff members in other similar districts.

Nobody spoke at the public hearing and board members did not comment. The teachers, administrative staff and confidential employees have not yet presented their contract proposals to the board.

Supt. William Rand has estimated that for every 1 percent across-the-board pay hike for all of the district workers, it would cost "roughly $50,000."

That means unless the board does not make further budget cuts or if more money does not become available from other sources, the funds are not there to increase salaries significantly, Rand said.

Imogene Speiser, president of the Association of Carmel Teachers, said her group understands the budget plight, but that pay raises are also important.

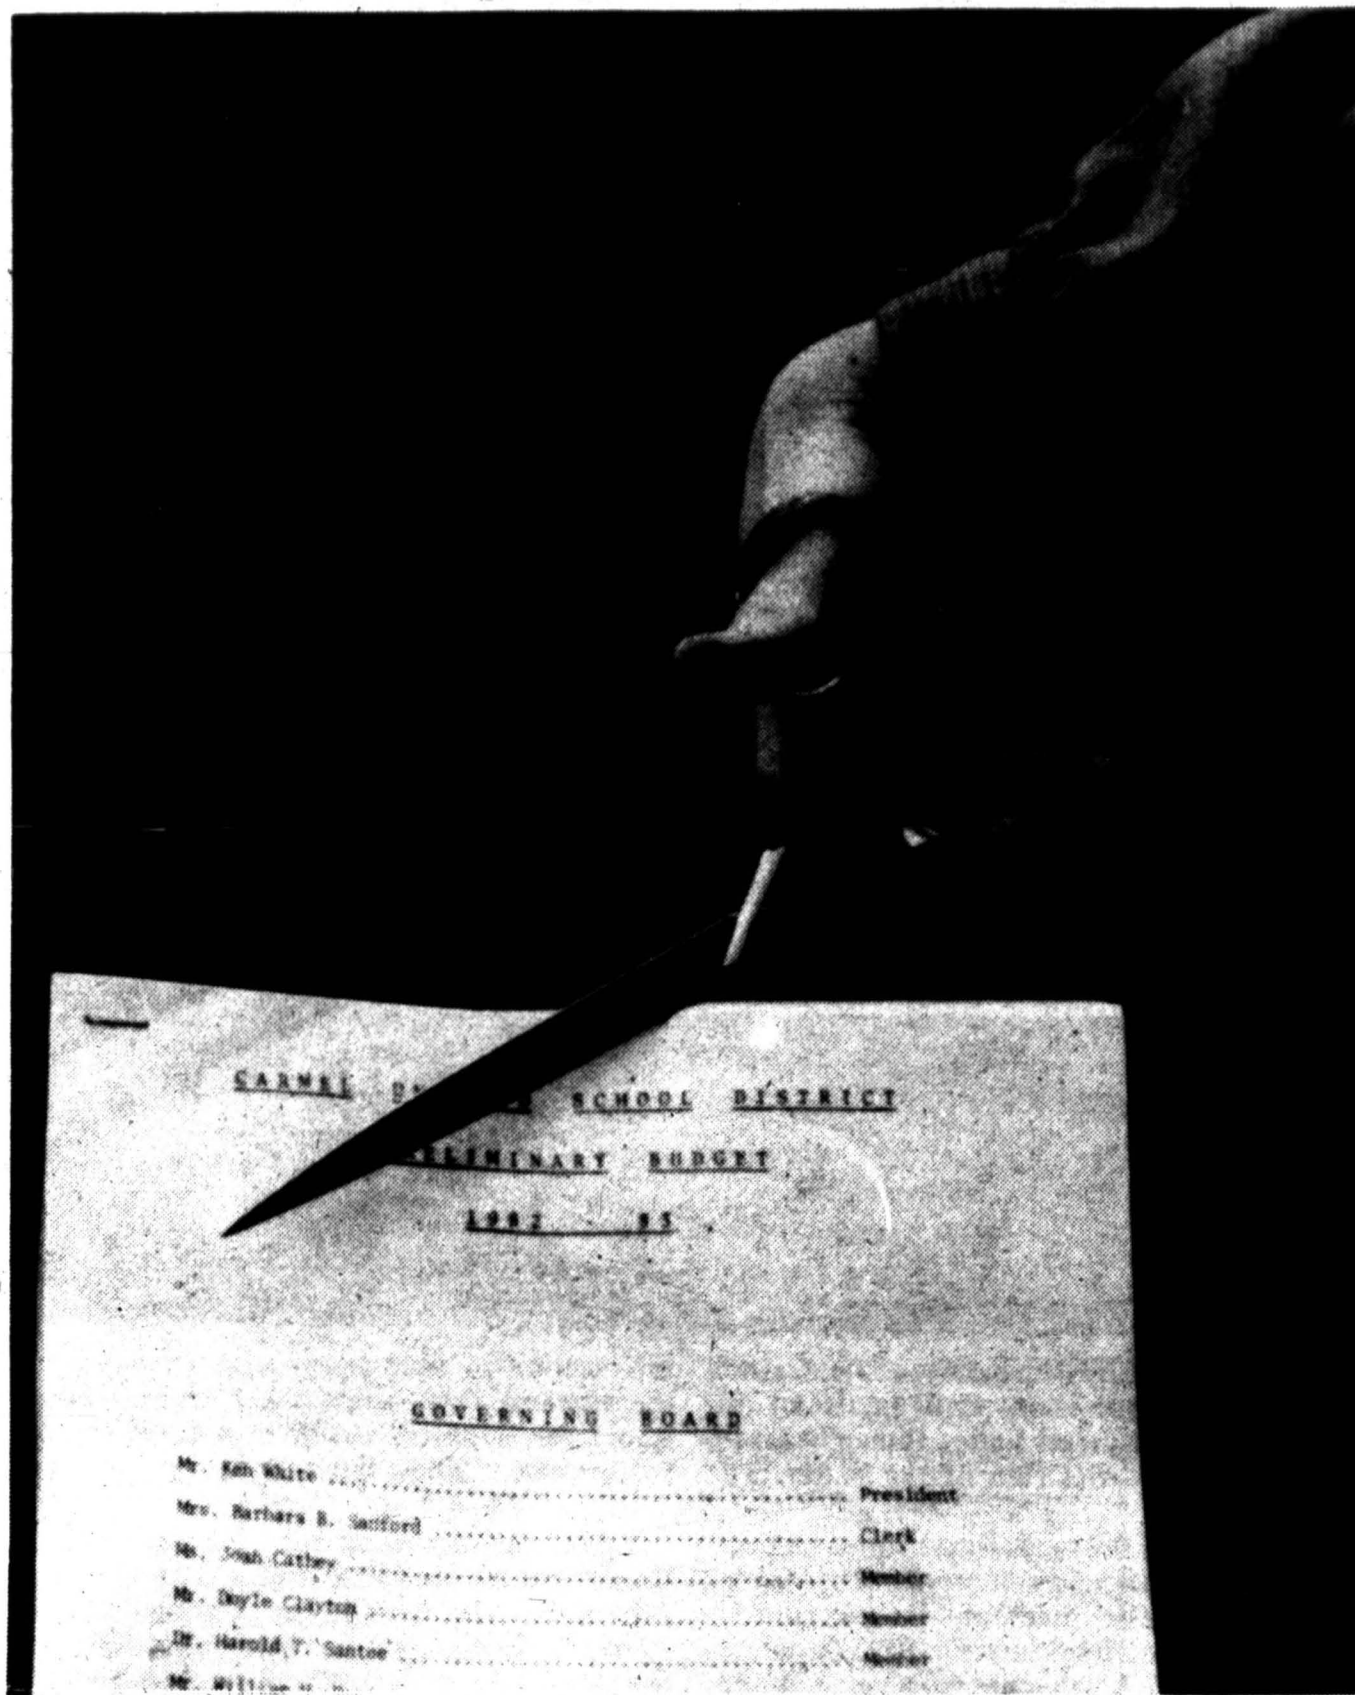

"The time has come when the people are going to have to get the message across to the state Legislature," she said. "Teachers realize the change has to come from Sacramento."

Ms. Speiser said the district could lose "experienced, qualified professionals" if an adequate pay hike is not granted. She did not specify a percentage because a proposal has not been made public.

"We lose good people every year," she said. "The thing that is even sadder is young people are not entering the field. It's a very frustrating time and place for teachers."

Another complication in district problems is that 85 percent of the budget is tied up in staff salaries, which means that only 15 percent of the budget can be trimmed, Rand said.

Under state law, teachers to be laid off

ACTION ON proposed budget cuts is expected by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees when it meets at 7 p.m.

must receive a "notice of intention to lay off" by March 15. The Carmel district decided to forego layoff notices and just realize any savings through normal attrition.

BECAUSE OF federal and state funding cutbacks, Carmel was faced with a deficit of about $350,000 when the preliminary 1982-83 budget was first prepared.

Through a series of cost-cutting measures, including the closing of Woods and Carmelo Schools (see related story this issue), the board was able to cut the deficit down to $191,000 at a March 23 study session.

At its May 11 meeting, the board was presented with a memo from the administrative council that included some good news: "other events" have occurred that have provided sufficient income to leave the district with a proposed $142,396 ending balance for its 1982-83 budget.

The ending balance will be carried over to the 1982-83 budget.

Some of the additional funds were derived from:

- More than $33,000 in additional interest income.

- An extra $50,000 estimated interest income for 1982-83.

- An extra $12,277 from the state for special education funding.

- Lowered estimated cost for special education program of $10,000.

- Utility cost estimates lowered by $2,090.

There were also several other minor changes that caused the ending balance to be adjusted downward.

The board was also presented with recommendations by the administrative council that would trim the $191,000 deficit to less than $5,000.

The recommendations were formulated after a survey of staff. Some of the key budget recommendations:

- Budget for just one teacher above the negotiated teacher-student ratio instead of the originally-proposed four extra teachers. The savings would be about $87,000.

- Postpone replacement of a mid-size bus to save $39,000.

- Drop plan for a study hall at the high school, which would have cost an estimated $10,000.

- Re-establish a sports participation fee at $35 per student per sport, which would generate an additional $18,000.

Four other key budget items that were surveyed, but were not on the administrative council's proposals included:

- Reduce the number of teachers from four to three at Carmel Valley High School. The move would have saved an estimated $23,000.

- Reduce or cancel the elementary music program. Reduction of one teacher would have saved $30,000 and a reduction of both teachers would have saved $60,000.

- Cancel the summer swim programs at Carmel Valley High School and Carmel High School. The move would have saved $8,700.

The administrative council proposals are only recommendations. The board will study the proposals and make a final decision by July 1, which is the deadline to submit the budget to the Monterey County Board of Education.

Board to decide between Italian or Chinese food

DICK BRUHN, lease-holder on the Doud Building, says Dock Lor has indicated he wants to retire so Bruhn has initiated plans to replace the Chinese Canton Restaurant with an Italian cafe called Giorgio's.

THE QUESTION of whether there will be an Italian cafe or Chinese Canton Restaurant in the Doud Building on Ocean Avenue may be resolved when the Carmel Board of Adjustments meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, May 26 at city hall.

The board will hold a public hearing on an application to open Giorgio's Italian Cafe at the site now occupied by Dock Lor's Chinese Canton Restaurant, south side of Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos Streets.

The application has been continued twice by the board, which has become involved in legal technicalities, the landlord-tenant relationship and a question whether Lor will actually retire and vacate the premises.

The first order of business for the board is to decide whether it wants to terminate a valid use permit for Lor to move his restaurant to the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and San Carlos Streets now occupied by Sample Safari.

The board is expected to rescind the old use permit, which was issued in late 1981.

Although board members have said that they did not want to get involved in a landlord-tenant relationship, most of the public discussion on the issue has centered on whether Lor will retire and if the leaseholder, Dick Bruhn, can require him to move.

Bruhn said Lor had indicated plans to retire two years ago when the lease expired in February, 1982. Lor is now on a month-to-month lease, he added.

However, Lor said he has no plans to retire and has expressed a desire to keep his restaurant.

Meanwhile, the use permit application is still pending from partners Tricia Aliotti and Maureen Duffv, who are co-owners of an Italian restaurant in Pacific Grove; and George Brook-Kothlow, an architect in Carmel.

Giorgio's would be an Italian Cafe that offers pizza, salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, fruit juices, desserts and light breakfasts. It would open from 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. under plans submitted to the city.

In other action, the board will consider another application by the Monterey Baking Co., south side of Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde Streets, to open a delicatessen.

A similar application was rejected by the board in February and there have been no changes listed in the new request, according to the planning department.

The land use committee voted May 12 to recommend denial of the application.

The committee's decision and the February vote for denial were based on the general plan moratorium, which states that the city cannot grant applications for new food service establishments unless that use can be "reasonably expected" to be allowed in the new general plan, which is under revision.

"This permit would have established a whole new food service establishment," said Carmel Planning Director Bob Griggs.

Think before buying, panel says

Carmel should turn its philosophy on site acquisition upside down, the General Plan Advisory Committee decided at its May 6 session.

In its review of the open space/conservation/scenic highway element of the general plan, the committee said that the city should list its needs before buying more property.

Previously, the city has bought property and then decided what to do with it, said committee member Gene Hammond.

The issue came up when the draft element under review listed several sites for the city to acquire. For "immediate needs." The sites included:

- The Hodges property, southeast of Dolores Street, for a corporation yard.

- The Tevis property, south side of Rio Road between Ladera and Lasuen Drives, and exchange this property for a parcel at the east end of the Little League park near Carmel Mission.

- The Handley property, southwest corner of Junipero Avenue and Fourth Street, for a parking lot.

However, the committee stopped short of making recommendations for a "use priority list." The committee decided that is a policy matter that should be left in the hands of the city council.

The next element on the committee agenda is housing, which will be discussed at 7:30 p.m. May 20 at City Hall.

After living in L.A. for thirty years, we love life here in Carmel. But too many people are moving here.

"Growth" is on the minds of people who live on the peninsula. When The National Bank of Carmel sent out a community survey that asked, "What do you think are the greatest problems facing us on the peninsula?", over 80% of you mentioned growth in one way or another.

The above response from a couple who recently moved here points up the complexity of the growth question.

A lot of people move to Carmel because they like its small town feeling. But by moving here, they make it a little bigger town.

Sometimes this leads to a "let me move here then let's raise the drawbridge" point of view.

What's the solution?

On one hand, it is a free country and people can move where they wish. Tourists are free to go where they want to go.

On the other hand, as one gentleman who wrote us puts it so well, "we only have so much land, our tourist accommodations can hold only so many tourists and our roads can only accommodate so many vehicles."

If you have any thoughts on what we can do about growth, individually or collectively, send them to The National Bank of Carmel, P.O. Drawer TT, Carmel, CA 93921.

We'll publish a summary of what local people think about this controversial issue later in the year.

Henson says: no conflict of interest and no plans to resign water position

By ROBERT MISKIMON

CARMEL VALLEY ATTORNEY Alexander Henson has no plans to resign as a director of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District or to disengage from a $3 million lawsuit against California-American Water Co. because of an alleged conflict of interest.

Charges that Henson has an unresolved conflict of interest surfaced again last week in the form of a letter — circulated to members of the water management district and the press — from Cal-Am attorney Lenard Weiss.

Previous allegations of conflict of interest were referred to the California Fair Political Practices Commission, and Henson has abided by an FPPC ruling that he may not vote on district improvement projects which affect Carmel River frontage property owners.

The most recent example of that was Henson's abstention last week from discussion of, and voting on, the proposed Carmel River management program to control river bank erosion. (See related story in this issue).

But Cal-Am attorney Weiss, in his recent letter, put Henson on notice that he would "present this matter to the court and to such public agencies as may be appropriate" unless Henson resigned from the water board and from his position as attorney for the Carmel River property owners who have sued Cal-Am.

"The public can not possibly be well served where the regulator and regulated are directly involved in litigation. Your dual role causes that result to the great detriment of the district's taxpayers."

Thrust of that lawsuit is that Cal-Am is responsible for erosion of river-front properties by allowing the water table to be drawn down too low, thus causing the death of bank-stabilizing river vegetation.

"These two positions can not be separated and they result in an irreconcilable conflict of interest which must be resolved immediately," Weiss insisted. "The conflicts result in serious violations of your duties as an attorney and a patent violation of Government Code Section 87100."

That section of the government code deals with conflict of interest in public officials, and states: "No public official at any level of government shall make, participate in making, or in any way attempt to influence a governmental decision in which he knows or has reason to know he has a financial interest."

Weiss alleged that Henson, as a director of the water management district, is in a position to obtain information "available only to the district."

The Cal-Am attorney also stated that since Henson has "a direct, personal and material economic interest" in the outcome of the Carmel Valley property owners' lawsuit, he has "every motive to cause the district to take actions which would benefit you and your clients in the litigation, even if they are not in the best interests of the district."

"YOU CAN NOT possibly be objective about matters before the district board which affect Cal-Am in which you participate," Weiss wrote. "The public can not possibly be well served where the regulator and regulated are directly involved in litigation. Your dual role causes that result to the great detriment of the district's taxpayers."

Henson's lawsuit against Cal-Am attempts to establish that "Cal-Am's management has been negligent in the conduct of the affairs of its business," Weiss noted.

"It is therefore your professional responsibility as an advocate in (the lawsuit) and consistent with your personal economic advantage and that of your clients to demonstrate in any way possible the existence of such purported negligence."

As a member of the water district board of directors, Henson is in a position to inquire into Cal-Am's management practices and policies, especially since he sits as a member of the district Demand Management Committee, Weiss said.

"One recent inquiry by that committee is whether some or all of the activities undertaken by the district should have previously been undertaken and presumably paid for by Cal-Am. That translates into an investigation into the competence and reasonableness of Cal-Am's decision-making process," Weiss stated. "It is obvious that you could use your position in this inquiry to benefit your clients in the litigation."

Because of his involvement in the lawsuit on behalf of river-front property owners, Henson has "every motive" to see that the water management district board makes "negative findings" about Cal-Am management, Weiss alleged.

Furthermore, when the question of a possible conflict of interest was presented to the FPPC several months ago, according to the Cal-Am attorney, Henson did not advise that agency that "a principal element of (Henson's) approach to both the Reimers litigation and (Henson's) work on the district's board is to attempt to establish that Cal-Am's management has acted improperly."

Henson said he is willing to meet with Weiss and with representatives of the FPPC to resolve "new issues" about possible conflict of interest raised by Weiss.

"I DON'T WANT any semblance of conflict. I have no quarrel with following whatever the FPPC says I should do. I see a need to abstain from voting only where my clients might be peculiarly benefitted over the general public," Henson told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"I've done everything I can to seek advice to make a determination about this. I've talked to the water district counsel and with the FPPC. I don't know what more I can do to insure that the opinion I get is correct."

Henson disputed Weiss' notion that he has access to some information about Cal-Am operations that is not available to the public — information which he can use to further his lawsuit against the water utility.

"The water district doesn't have access to any information other than that which is public," Henson said. "Weiss suggests that the district has access to some secret company files. In fact, the information flow is in the other direction."

"I'm giving the district information I have learned through my involvement in the lawsuit. If anything, I'm using my litigation hat to pursue the public interest. The district has no way to compel the water district to give them secret information."

Henson said his clients won a major victory last month in a ruling by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano that American Water Works — the holding company for Cal-Am — could be named in the lawsuit. The case will go to trial "sometime this year," Henson estimated.

The Carmel Valley attorney also incurred the wrath of Cal-Am with his recent suggestion that the water management district look into possible condemnation of Cal-Am.

"I would have suggested that of any water company that proposed a very large rate increase," Henson said, with reference to Cal-Am's request to the state Public Utilities Commission for a 60 percent rate hike.

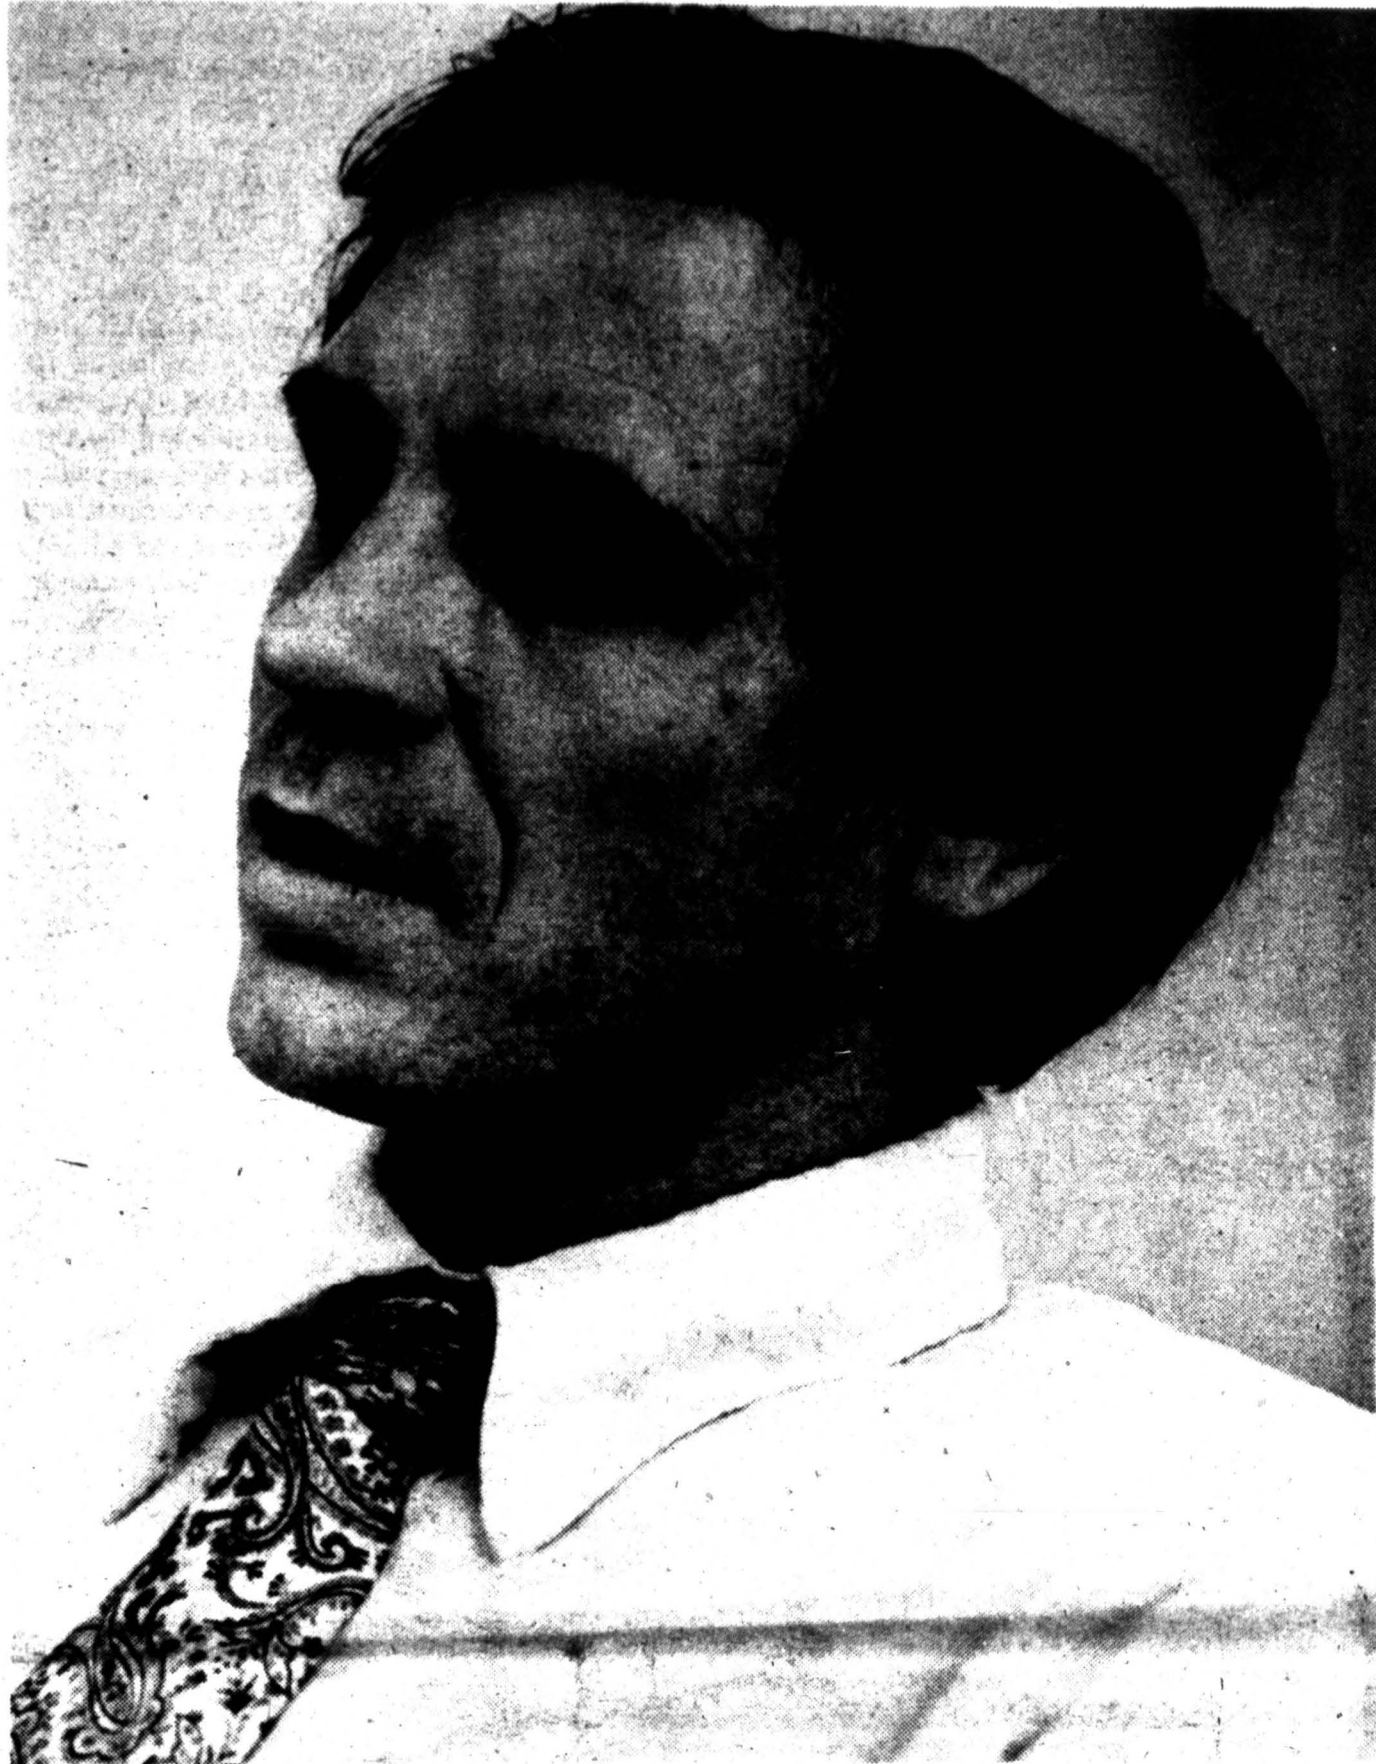

"The whole reason for the water management district being formed is that Cal-Am wasn't taking care of the needs of the community. I will not resign from either position."

"I was handling this case when I was elected to the board," Henson said. "The electorate knew about my participation in this lawsuit. The reason they elected me was that I would be a watchdog on the water company."

Henson said he will protest Weiss' conduct to the California Bar Association unless the Cal-Am attorney retracts his statements.

"He will either retract that or I'll refer it to the state bar for a violation of professional ethics," Henson said. "He's threatening to bring administrative remedies to bear on me to gain advantage in a civil lawsuit."

"The whole reason for the water management district being formed is that Cal-Am wasn't taking care of the needs of the community. I will not resign from either position."

ALEXANDER HENSON of Carmel Valley says he will not resign as a member of the Board of Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and will not remove himself from a lawsuit against Cal-Am Water Co. on behalf of Carmel Valley property owners, despite continued charges he has a conflict of interest.

ON THE MUSTANG field, the action was heavy with bats connecting and runners sliding. Orange Julius took at 14-3 game from Rudy-Harris with Scott Gill pitching the win.

Hitting triples were: Russell Peavy and Gabriel Montgomery-Downs (OJ) and Ivo Staiano (RH). Scott Gill picked up two doubles to help his own cause plus another from teammate Adam Vesper. Nicole Dauphine (OJ) and Jimmy Witherell (RH) both got two hits.

Dick Bruhn topped Motorsports 6-3 when Scott Smith collected two doubles. Motorsport doubles came from the bats of Jerry Ledzinski, Kevin Winton, and Carlos Moore. The County Mounties and Rudy-Harris played to a 4-4 tie. Rick Prieto went three for three including a double while teammates Matt Dickerhoof, Benno Weiner, and Donnie Smythe were all two for three for CM. Jimmy Witherell added a triple for RH as well as going two for three. Aaron Anderson also doubled for CM.

Chris Prieto scored a home run on an error to help the County Mounties go ahead of Carmel Insurance 8-6. Lots of triples were hit by Ryan Meyer and Steven White (CI) and Donnie Smythe and Aaron Anderson (CM). Adding extra bases were: Chris Prieto (CM), Matt Little (CI), and Brendan Wolf (CI). One of Carmel Insurance' leading hitters, Jason Vogelpohl, hit into a double play which was executed by Aaron Anderson.

Orange Julius crushed Motorsports 9-2 with Scott Gill doubling and pitching the win. Other doubles were: Erin Saluta and Russell Peavy for OJ and Robbie Takigawa and Carlos Moore for MS. Gabriel Montgomery-Downs added three hits for the winners. Dick Bruhn squeaked by Carmel Insurance 5-4 with Scott Smith at the mound. Scott also was credited with a triple and a double. Christopher Karachale and Andy Rotharmel both tripled for DB; Danny Kleinbardt doubled for DB as did Matt Little for CI.

When Derek Rayne faced Pine Inn on the Bronco field, the final outcome was DR 9; PI 5. Cory Keith was the pitcher of record by giving up only two hits and no runs in three innings. PI's pitcher Darren Read only gave up one hit. Aaron Eppler's solid base hit broke open a tight game in the fifth inning. Defensively, Eric Mahlum made an unassisted double play at second base. Craig Cox was two for three for DR and David Faber two for four for PI.

John Roscelli took a 9-2 game from Nielsen Market with Jeff Roberts emerging as the winning pitcher. Tom White had a big day scoring three runs and grabbing a hard hit line drive by Josh Banks. Jason Anzalone caught a high fly ball in right field and George Repine, playing in his first game, pitched a strong seventh inning to retire the side for NM. Beau Brushert (JR) and Chris Stevenson (NM) tallied up doubles.

Lots of hitting from both teams saw the final score read La Playa 16, Pine Inn 9. Some of those hits came in the form of doubles from Mike Little, who also went two for three and Mindy Faia, who went two for four. Other La Playa hitters were: Eric Sincoff and Chip Meheen, both three for four. Adding to Pine Inn's total were: Jason Lande, two for four including a double, David Faber two for three, Darren Read two for four, and Adam Green two for four. Brian Young also doubled for PI and Paul Wagstaff helped pitch the win.

GERSON PERRY added to the excitement to end the game between John Roscelli and La Playa. Gerson doubled, stole third base, and came home on an overthrow: final score JR 13, LP 3. Chris England (JR) made two excellent catches in right field. Brandon Kirsch had two hits for JR and Jeff Roberts contributed in the pitching department.

Chris Stevenson, playing for Nielsen Market, hit a home run against Derek Rayne. It wasn't quite enough, however, as DR won a close game 14-11. J.P. McNamara made a good catch in left field, hit a double, and went two for three for NM. Also doubling for NB was Josh Banks at 2x3. Brett Ledbetter went three for four plus getting the win from the mound; Steve Szasz (DR) two for four. George Repine (NM) made a diving catch and held on to Ledbetter's hard hit ball to right field. Going two for four for DR was Christian Cumming.

Lots of action occurred on the softball field as Carmel Plaza took care of their latest opponents. Monice Reardon pitched her first shutout of the year and caught two fly balls; the final outcome was Carmel Plaza 10, Monterey Intersport 0. Richelle Rudinski hit a home run and brought in Brandy Brushert for additional RBIs added to her doubles in the first and third innings. Sandy Morris also helped out in the RBI department as did Claire Troian. Lisa Serrano caught a great fly ball while playing second base.

Then, in a game called because of the 10-run rule, Carmel Plaza defeated Fort Ord by a whopping 32-1. As in the first game, Monica Reardon pitched the win and this time also had a home run. Chalk up two more home runs for Richelle Rudinski along with a double. Kim Gisse added a triple, Claire Troian, a double, and Becky Eskind some additional hits.

Herma Smith Curtis' girls took a 13-3 game from ELA under Suzanne Suwada's pitching. Hitting well for HSC were: Sandra Harris, Jackie Gardner, Jamie Parrish, Lisa Miller and Valerie Wester. Valerie made an outstanding back-up on first. Nancy Penn had a good day defensively and Gina Palumbo was robbed of a great hit which sailed into the outfield.

Major league girls on Village Inn have a win streak going under Stacey White's strong pitching arm. A terrific defensive game was Teri Giammanco's when she made seven outs, including four in a row! Trying out some new positions, Amy Fuller pitched two innings and Tami Fuller tried rover when VI faced R & R Construction from Pacific Grove. The Carmel girls came from behind to post an 11-8 win.

Carmel Woods annexation petition filed with LAFCO

CARMEL WOODS residents have filed a petition with the Local Agency Formation Commission for annexation to Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The petition is the first step toward formal annexation proceedings for the unincorporated area which covers 170 acres on the northeast side of Carmel.

A group of Carmel Woods residents has formed a group known as Carmel Annexation Now II (CAN II) to press for annexation. A similar move in 1979 which also included Hatton Fields failed by 102 votes.

The petition submitted to LAFCO last Friday contains the signatures of 142 Carmel Woods residents; they will be checked by the Monterey County Elections Department to verify that they are the names of registered voters.

Annexation proceedings begin when a valid petition which bears the signatures of at least 5 percent of the registered voters in the area proposed for annexation is filed with LAFCO.

The elections department said there are 925 registered voters in the area proposed for annexation to Carmel.

"After the signatures are verified, we must prepare a staff analysis showing property tax transfers from the county to the city if annexation took place," said Mike Johnson, executive officer of LAFCO. "The transfer of property tax revenues must be approved in substantially the same form by both the board of supervisors and the city council."

Johnson said he expects that report to be presented to the board of supervisors within the next two weeks, and possibly at the May 25 meeting of the board.

And a hearing on the proposed annexation is tentatively scheduled before LAFCO at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 22 at the county courthouse in Salinas, if the required 5 percent of signatures are verified and if the supervisors and council approve the tax transfers, Johnson said.

At the time of hearing on the proposed annexation, LAFCO either approves or disapproves; if the annexation is approved, the matter is scheduled for a protest hearing by the Carmel City Council.

If less than 25 percent of the registered voters in the area proposed for annexation protest, then the council must approve annexation without an election. If protests are raised by 25 to 50 percent of the registered voters, the council must — by state law — approve annexation subject to popular vote at election.

And if more than 50 percent of the voters in the area to be annexed protest, annexation proceedings are terminated.

LOS PADRES reservoir, located above San Clemente reservoir, has a storage capacity of 2,000 ac. ft. of water, and is designed to

On-channel dam could help restore Carmel River to health, study says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL RIVER could flow year-round and begin its long road back to health if an on-channel dam is constructed, according to results of research by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

A dam with storage capacity of 27,000 acre feet on the upper Carmel River would permit a radical revision in the way Monterey Peninsula water resources are used, Manager Bruce Buel said.

In conjunction with a program to restore riparian vegetation as a means to control erosion of the Carmel River Banks, and with a comprehensive fisheries management scheme, another dam could be the key ingredient in restoration of the river to a state of equilibrium, Buel indicated.

The district has compiled preliminary results from a $225,000 research program which covers hydrology, sedimentation, groundwater, vegetation, and fisheries.

Research also has shown that the Carmel River aquifer recharges itself very rapidly — a fact which will be helpful in a more accurate projection of the "safe yield" for groundwater withdrawals, Buel indicated.

Those results are to be presented to the board of directors in a special meeting June 7 to determine whether to proceed with plans for construction of a dam, or whether to investigate other ways to increase the water supply.

If another dam is constructed, water could be released to keep the river flowing year-round, Buel said. This would enhance preservation of steelhead fisheries and would permit water for human needs to be withdrawn near the mouth of the river instead of at the reservoir, as is the case now.

"We will have a computer model of ways to operate the fisheries and different water diversion schemes," Buel said. "Our operational model is a dam with 27,000 ac. ft. storage; the calculations will be based on releasing water downstream instead of taking it from the reservoir."

Under current operations by California-American Water Co., Los Padres reservoir — with a 2,000 ac. ft. storage capacity — is used to feed the 1,200 ac. ft. capacity San Clemente reservoir, located below Los Padres.

Roughly 7,000 ac. ft. of water per year is withdrawn directly from the San Clemente reservoir; between 5,000 and 7,000 ac. ft. is withdrawn from Carmel Valley wells; and 2,000 to 4,000 ac. ft. is taken from the Seaside underground aquifer, Buel indicated.

The operational scheme to be presented to the board of directors June 7 envisions steady releases of water from the reservoirs to keep some flow in the Carmel River year-round, except in drought years.

Most of the water used for human consumption would then be pumped from the steadily-recharged Carmel Valley aquifer, and from the area of the river at Highway 1.

"THE OPERATION would be to divert as much water as possible at Highway 1 or draw it out elsewhere in the Valley," Buel said. "We could have either a small check dam above the lagoon or shallow wells. The objective is to establish year-round flows above the narrows (area between Mid-Valley Shopping Center and Garland Park). When there is water in the reservoir, we'd release it to maintain flows in the river."

"When the reservoir is low and we didn't expect rain, we would pump in the lower Valley to maintain flows and to keep water in the river above the narrows."

If a proposed $150,000-per-year management plan to restore river vegetation is implemented, the year-round flows would help to remove accumulated sediment which clogs the river channels, Buel said.

Healthy river vegetation would help stabilize the banks to control erosion and sedimentation, he noted.

All areas of research undertaken by the district are inter-related and point to the need for a coordinated approach to management of both the river and stored water resources, Buel said.

One important fact which water directors will learn at their June 7 meeting is that a single, larger dam on the upper river appears to be less costly and more efficient than two or more off-channel reservoirs.

"To build a 9,000 ac. ft. San Clemente Creek site reservoir and a 5,000 ac. ft. Cachagua Creek site would cost about $60 million," Buel said. "A 27,000 ac. ft., on-channel reservoir would cost about $43 million."

"It looks as if smaller dams are less efficient and more expensive per volume of storage. And it looks like the off-channel sites proposed would not provide the yield necessary to adequately serve people."

The current annual demand for water in the Cal-Am service area is 16,000 ac. ft., which is expected to increase to 28,900 ac. ft. per year by the year 2020.

"When the average demand gets to that point, we don't want to be vulnerable to another drought," Buel said. "We must satisfy fisheries and human needs; a 27,000 ac. ft. reservoir would do both."

"With off-channel reservoirs, we'd have serious shortfalls — even worse than in the last drought — and we'd lose the fisheries. The off-channel choice looks more expensive and less efficient than the on-channel reservoir."

As part of its extensive research program, the water management district has installed measuring stations on the eight major tributaries of the Carmel River to ascertain the contribution of each to the total river flow.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT Frances Krebs said the measuring devices have allowed her to calculate the relative percentages of river flow which come from different reaches of the river.

The results show that some 64,000 ac. ft. of runoff is generated per year at San Clemente dam; about 12,800 ac. ft. per year between San Clemente and the narrows; and another 1,920 ac. ft. between the narrows and Carmel Bay, she said.

"We've used this information to model operations for a certain size dam and in developing fisheries rules," Ms. Krebs said. "With this information you can determine how much flow is needed for fisheries and to recharge the aquifer."

Sediment transport in the Carmel River has been the subject of investigation by consultant Matt Kondolf of the University of California, Santa Cruz. Kondolf developed 28 profiles of sediment transport at various locations in the river through sampling last winter.

His research will be critical in a determination of what kind of river flows will be needed to flush out the years of accumulated sediment, which has aggravated the problem of river bank erosion, Buel explained.

"The river is so clogged with material that it is doing no scouring," Buel said. "There are large deposits of sand in the river that are basically coming from the banks. The river is cutting into the banks and creating great lumps of sediment that are pushed along downstream."

THE PROBLEM, as was pointed out by geologist Dr. Robert Curry in a recent interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook, is that the Carmel River flow is not fast or strong enough to push all the sediment out to sea.

SEDIMENT SAMPLES are measured by Matt Kondolf at Potrero Creek, as part of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's comprehensive study of the Carmel River.

The result is that the river channel becomes broader and shallower, forcing the river to erode more and more of its banks, in a self-destructive cycle.

"Even if we started normal flows today in the river, it would take up to 20 years to flush out the accumulated sediment," Buel said. "The river management program would allow us to cut off the erosion by cutting off the source of most of the sediment material."

Research also has shown that the Carmel River aquifer recharges itself very rapidly — a fact which will be helpful in a more accurate projection of the "safe yield" for groundwater withdrawals, Buel indicated.

Three transects were drilled laterally through 11 wells in Carmel Valley, and 26 other wells were monitored, to determine how fast water levels rose during recharge.

"We've found that during the first flow of the river, there is a tremendous recharge of about 3,000 gallons per minute. It doesn't matter whether the water table is completely drawn down or not; there is a very rapid infiltration rate for a short period of time when the river flow starts."

NINETY-FIVE percent of the recharge into the Carmel Valley underground aquifer is from the Carmel River, Buel added.

"The yield question is as much political as technical," he said. "The variable is how low the community is willing to let the groundwater table get."

That concern is linked with the issue of river vegetation — another area where the water management district has expended research funds. The basic question under investigation here is: how much water, at what depth, is needed for healthy riparian vegetation?

"We've been monitoring the riparian vegetation since last April," Buel indicated. "We've tried to develop a baseline on how much water it needs in dry periods, and how much ground water in proximity to the roots is needed."

Tests have measured plant physiology during a normal, "wet" year such as this past winter. Those results can now be compared with physiological measurements during drought periods.

"We now have a normal curve of the plants when they go through their cycles in a wet year," Buel said. "We know how the normal cycle works and we also have some knowledge of stressed plants. We want to know how deep the ground water levels can be and whether the plants can be provided adequate water through irrigation."

The bulk of the research funds — about $100,000 — has been designated for fisheries investigation in connection with requirements for dams of various sizes and locations. Consultant Don Kelley has focused his studies on types of flows needed for up and downstream fish migration, pool and ripple sequence, shade and temperature factors.

River management plan could hinge on costs

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WHO PAYS for what could become a crucial question in the fate of a $150,000-per-year Carmel River proposed management program.

Monterey Peninsula Water Management District directors have approved $26,000 in engineering studies necessary to place the plan before Carmel Valley voters in November.

Carmel Valley property owners would pay 51 percent of the program costs through establishment of a benefit assessment zone — if approved by Valley voters.

Water consumers throughout the Monterey Peninsula would shoulder 49 percent of the costs through a surcharge to be levied against their water bills. They would have no vote on the surcharge.

When the board of directors approved further analysis of the proposal before it is placed on the ballot, citizens expressed different views on how the costs should be distributed.

Paul Northrup of Monterey said he felt the program to restore the river "should be paid for by the people who use it."

"Why should the people of Monterey pay for taking care of the Carmel River when it has no effect on us?" Northrup asked. "That river is on a rampage, but that does not affect the water that sinks down and is drawn out."

On the other hand, Richard Heuer of the Carmel River Watch, urged the board to support the proposed method of cost distribution. Carmel River Watch, a citizen environmental organization, supports the proposal.

"Support for this program in the Valley is conditional upon shared funding," Heuer said. "Without shared costs, you do not have the support of CREW. If you can not vote for the whole plan, then do not vote for any of the lesser alternatives."

Under the proposal, the 51 percent of costs to be paid by Carmel Valley property owners would be greater for river front dwellers than for those with property in the watershed area. Water users outside the Carmel Valley benefit zone would pay about $2.42 per year in surcharges.

Part of the $26,000 in engineering studies authorized by the board would be a parcel-by-parcel cost analysis for 5,333 properties which would be included in the assessment zone, 500 of which are river front properties, Manager Bruce Buel said.

Estimated cost for a property owner with 100 feet of river frontage would be $30 per year.

The river management program, which is also supported by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, would involve replanting of river vegetation and other activities to control erosion and sedimentation.

PEGGY WARD of Carmel Valley expressed concern that about half of the estimated $150,000 budget would go for administrative costs.

"That only leaves about $75,000 for the river," she told directors at their May 10 meeting. "Has anyone gone out to a private contractor to see what this would cost? It would cost more than $1 million over 10 years, at about $100,000 per year."

"It really bothers me to start up another organization and right away one-half will go to administration."

Chairwoman Nancy McClintock explained that most of the "administrative" costs would involve engineering and technical studies to determine what projects should be undertaken, and how, before the work is contracted with a private firm.

"Why should the people of Monterey pay for taking care of the Carmel River when it has no effect on us?"

Carl Hooper, a Monterey engineer, also questioned costs and their distribution.

"I wonder if it's fair to make river front property owners pay who have already spent lots of money on their property. I don't think it's fair to spread the costs based on acreage," Hooper said.

"The engineering and administration costs are about five or six times what you normally think of as adequate. Rather than setting up another burdensome layer of bureaucracy, you should be looking more to private enterprise."

Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley said the program might require more than the 10 years projected, and cost more than estimated, to be effective.

The board of directors will schedule a protest hearing on the river management program before it finally decides to place it on the November ballot. The hearing is tentatively set for July 12, Buel indicated.

to measure stream flow in the Carmel River. (Frances Krebs photo).

Who would own new dam?

IF VOTERS of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District decide to construct another dam on the Carmel River, who would own the multi-million-dollar project?

That's a question certain to be raised as the debate about construction of another dam heats up in the months ahead — regardless of whether the board of directors pursues a $43 million or $60 million project.

Would the taxpayers of the Monterey Peninsula, in effect, be asked to subsidize profits for a private corporation — California-American Water Co. — if a dam is constructed? That's another question sure to be asked.

"The water management district would own the structure and the property if another dam is built," said water district manager Bruce Buel. "The district would sell the water to Cal-Am wholesale so they could retail it."

Construction of another dam would mean that Los Padres dam, the uppermost of the two dams on the Carmel River, would be retained as a functional reservoir, but San Clemente dam, the lower of the two, would be inundated. Both existing dams are property of Cal-Am Water Co.

"If a new dam is constructed, we would have to reach an agreement on how much water at the new dam belongs to Cal-Am," Buel said.

The rate structure for Cal-Am, is controlled by the state Public Utilities Commission, not the water management district. The PUC regulates the profit margin for the company. That structure is based on the value of the water company's facilities in service, Buel noted.

"Cal-Am's only profit is off the facilities they actually have in service," he said. "If we built another dam, we would actually be removing one of their dams from service. Any water we sell them will be passed along to consumers without a profit to Cal-Am."

"The PUC allows Cal-Am enough revenue to cover their expenses, plus 11 percent. The rates are based on their investment in their total plant. They would not earn one penny of profit off this water, from another dam," Buel said.

Cal-Am has filed a request for a 60 percent rate increase over a three-year period with the PUC, but no action has been taken on that request.

Hearing Tuesday on wastewater

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board Supervisors is to hold a public hearing at 3 p.m., Tuesday, May 25 on a wastewater management study of Carmel Valley.

The $30,000 study was performed by Montgomery Engineers of San Francisco under a joint contract with Monterey County and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The study suggests that ultimate growth limits envisioned in the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan would have to be reduced unless the Valley is sewered, or land use patterns are changed.

Carmel Valley currently has about 4,000 dwelling units, and that number is projected to increase to 6,500 units by the year 2000, under the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

"Ultimate buildout capacity of the (Carmel Valley) study area would be 10,400 units under the land use patterns projected by the 1980 Master Plan," the Montgomery study said.

"However, if the central wastewater facilities are not expanded, the number of homes would be limited to 9,540 to protect groundwater quality. The projected 20-year growth could be accommodated using septic systems, although development patterns specified in the Master Plan must be modified."

The study found that safe development limits already have been reached in the Carmel Valley Village area with the use of septic systems, and it recommends that future development be dispersed outside the Carmel Valley Village-Schulte Road-Rancho Rio Vista area.

The 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan is to be revised before it is readopted by the board of supervisors, under a Monterey County Superior Court decision which forced preparation of an environmental impact report on the plan.

Land use patterns in the Master Plan must be reviewed in light of all environmental information, including the recently-completed EIR and the wastewater management study. The hearing is to be held in supervisors' chambers at the courthouse in Salinas.

CVPOA calls for impact study on water plans

An environmental impact report to study all alternatives for supplying water to Carmel Valley users was endorsed by the board of directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association at its meeting Wednesday, May 12 at Mid-Valley fire station.

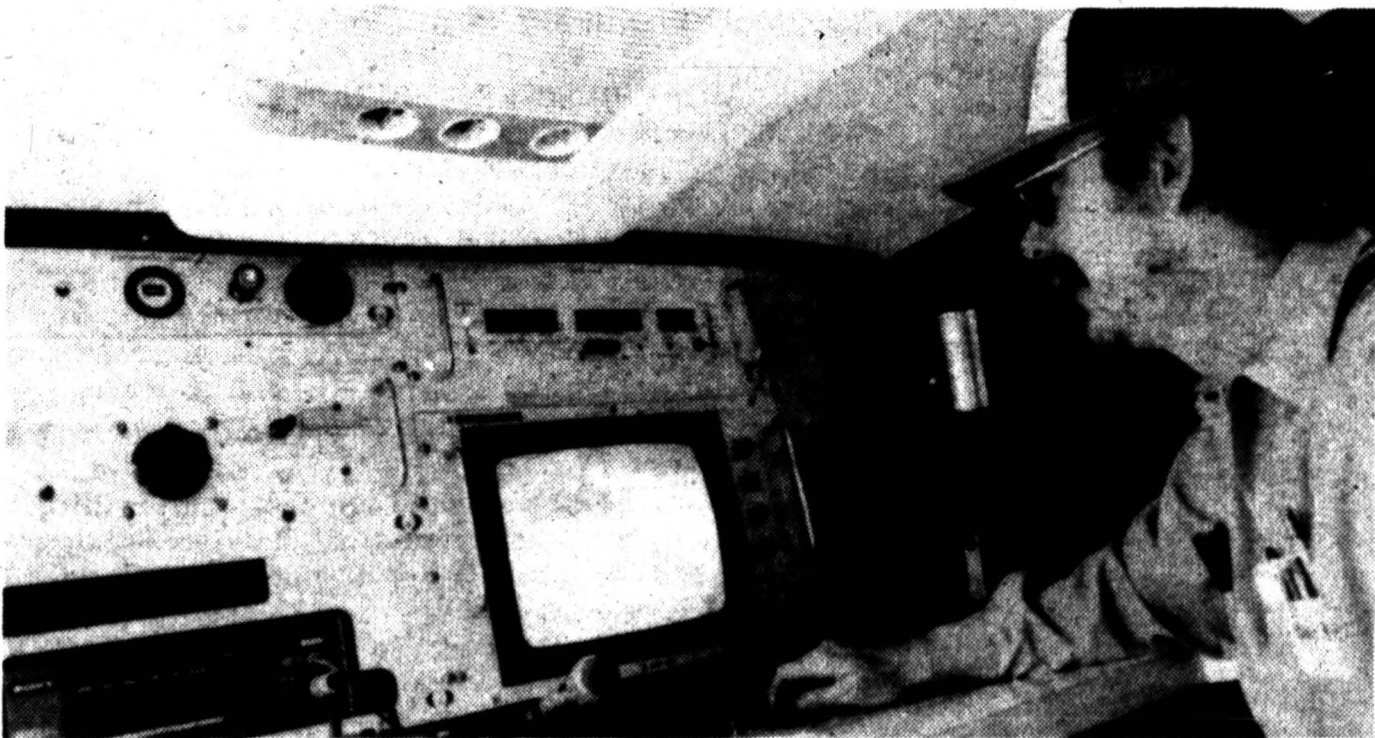

The endorsement followed a detailed explanation by Bruce Buel, manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, on three reports about up-river dam and reservoir studies to be given the Water Management Board at its meeting June 7.

In other action, the CVPOA board voted to support the need for air pollution monitoring equipment to be installed in the Valley to replace equipment recently removed because of a lack of air conditioned space to house the equipment.

Shirley Nimmons, chairman of the CVPOA membership committee, reported that 30 new members joined the organization as a result of the May 8 barbecue and family day at Robles del Rio Lodge.

THE CARMEL Sanitary District has rented a special television camera that helps locate problems in the sewer lines. Workers will send the camera through the sewer lines throughout the district this month. Above, Dave Sollid watches the video screen to record problems.

Sanitary district uses television to help locate trouble in the sewers

ALTHOUGH many government agencies face budget cuts and layoffs, the Carmel Sanitary District is in such good shape that it can keep user fees at $6 and also hire another fulltime employee.

That forecast will be given to the board of directors when it meets at 1:30 p.m. today (May 20) at Carmel City Hall.

Manager Michael Zambory said the proposed district operating budget will be $1.069 million for 1982-83, up from the $960,000 in 1981-82.

Zambory predicted the district will not have to increase the $6 user fee because a new sludge disposal system will save nearly $80,000.

The district also plans to hire a laboratory assistant, a position which has become necessary because of state and federal test requirements, Zambory added.

In other action, the board will receive a report on the success of an annual program that uses a television camera to locate problems in the sewer lines.

District workers will continue to operate the camera system through this month, Zambory said.

The district has rented a special television camera for $2,700 that can be sent through the pipelines on a cable.

Trouble areas can be spotted on the video screen and recorded. A special device measures how far along the pipe the camera is when a leak or crack is found. Later, the employees know exactly where to dig up the pipe if the problem is that serious.

The camera has already saved the district from digging up one Carmel resident's yard.

Business BeatCarmel PhotoArt
tries to satisfy
city rules

By FLORENCE MASON

WHAT IS happening at Carmel PhotoArt? The company has taken a number of steps to emphasize its photography gallery and co-owner Martin Fox assured the Business License and Code Review Board that neither he nor his partner, Arnold Bernstein, would have any objection to examination of their books. As a result, the board voted to carry over its inquiry into the Paradise Mall store's operation to June 10.

At issue are questions about Carmel PhotoArt's compliance with the city's zoning law and business license regulations. Specifically, the city wants assurances that at least 51 percent of the business is from retail sales — a legitimate activity in that location — rather than from photo processing.

Among the steps taken by the company to comply with these requirements, Fox said Carmel PhotoArt no longer sells supplies to Quick Photo, a San Francisco company, or to any other company; the gallery has been expanded to include photographs by a number of artists in addition to George Hurrell; and Valerie Lane has been employed as gallery director (reported in this column previously).

Ms. Lane told the board she is looking for local talent, has upgraded advertisements for the gallery, and has changed the window displays on Dolores Street to include the work of several photographers. She said she is also adding "fine art photography books" for sale.

Board members listened intently, with little comment. City Atty. George Brehmer said the operation had been "grossly, obviously photo processing and that was what brought the city into it. Hopefully, the actions you have taken will bring the business in line with the intent of your license."

It was clear that the board's primary interest was in the books of the company and in seeing figures that would show the relative contributions to gross income made by retail sales, including the gallery, as opposed to photo processing. Fox assured the board that he and his partner want to stay in business in Carmel and want to comply with the regulations.

He said he has no objection to an examination of the firm's books by an independent CPA "and neither will my partner." Previously, the board's attempts to review the books before the end of the company's first full year of operation had met with opposition from Bernstein.

Fox's assurances resulted in the vote to continue the matter for one month, which allowed time for review of the books. Still not decided was whether the review would be made by city staff or an independent CPA. Fox clearly stated his preference for an independent CPA.

One of his concerns was the confidentiality of the information the company would supply. He was assured that the city is already privy to much confidential information about local businesses in connection with its license responsibilities.

Assistant Fire Chief Vern Allred closed the discussion on a somewhat optimistic note when he said to Fox: "We now have indications that you are trying to conform."

MEANWHILE, BACK AT BURLWOOD GALLERY ...

Debra Drake's interest is in keeping her separate business at that Ocean Avenue location going, despite Burlwood's bankruptcy action and withdrawal from the premises. Ms. Drake, who also has a jewelry shop in the Plaza mini-mall, applied for a business license and will operate "Giles Carmel" at least until mid-July, when Burlwood's court action may be resolved.

Gold designs by Giles have been available in the Burlwood Gallery for some time, as is jewelry in another separate enterprise there.

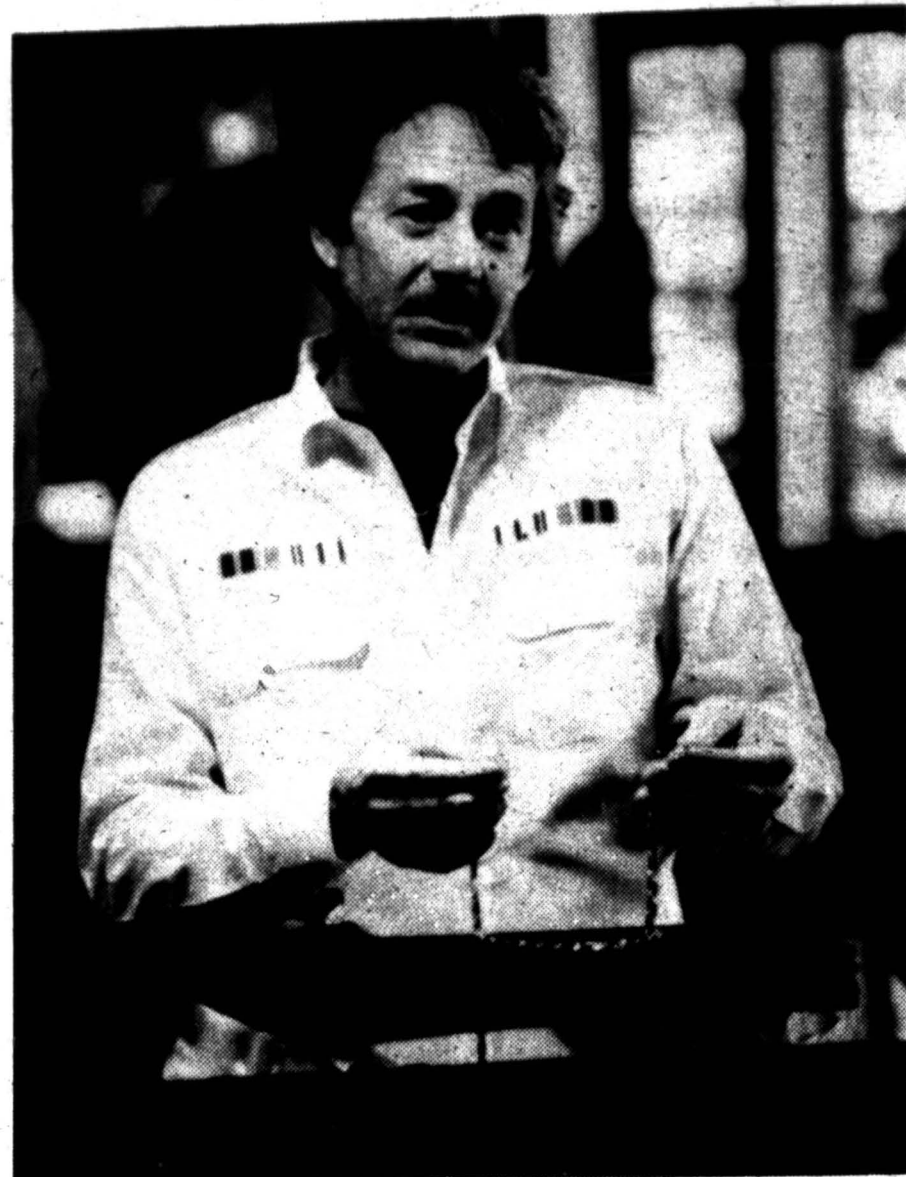

The board did address the issue of whether or not this would come under the city's ordinance against the subdivision of business space. The conclusion was that it does not, since the space itself is not subdivided, there are no changes in the premises and the company has been operating at that location since well before passage of the ordinance.

NEW OWNERS FOR OLD BUSINESSES

Two sales we can tell you about today, with details to come in a future column:

Jim and Susan Dougherty, well-known on the local business scene, are the new owners of Spencers Carmel, the stationery, gift and art supplies store on Ocean Avenue.

A partnership of Randolph Bills, Julian Bills and Lang Chou hopes to become the new owners of one of Carmel's oldest hostelrys, the Green Lantern Inn. "We've made an offer and if it works out we hope to take over in June," Bills told the business license board. The partners were granted a business license with the reminder that it is a legal non-conforming use in the residential zone, which means that alterations or additions would open the inn to the full use permit process.

AND AT MONTEREY BAKING COMPANY ...

Something new has been added in the Ocean Avenue store. It's up the stairs — a market that sells imported items such as cheese, meats, chocolate, tea. "And Monterey Jack cheese, too," adds Abdul Sotoodeh, who with his wife is in charge of the enterprise.

The emphasis may be on imports but there are local products, too. I spied some of the special jams, jellies and relishes made locally and learned that the baking company has applied for a license to sell wine and beer.

Abdul, a quiet man with a sense of humor, seems to enjoy his corner of the baking company premises, and you can be sure of a smiling welcome. He has lived in Carmel 20 years. Originally from Iran, he was owner of the Import House in Carmel Plaza before he embarked on this smaller scale but pleasant enterprise.

Another note from that busy location: the baking company, turned down in an earlier attempt to add a delicatessen, is making another try. This second application comes up next Wednesday (May 26) at the Carmel Board of Adjustments meeting. What they want is to be able to make sandwiches and other delicatessen items on the premises, in addition to providing the ingredients.

MORE BUSINESS, WITH PLEASURE

"Monterey's first-ever professional office condominium" is now open. Clocktower Place, a five-building complex, occupies the corner of Clocktower Place and Via Nona Marie in the "Carmel Rancho" area.

The effect is just as marketing director Lillie Lambert told us it is: "the feeling of being in a small European village." That is accomplished by graduated ramps, courtyards separating the buildings, flower boxes and a 45-foot-high clocktower. Still to be unveiled is sculpture by Carmel artist Malcom Moran.

Looking more like a residential complex than the efficient business offices it is, the complex has heavy cedar shakes, wood trim and stucco exteriors. There are old-fashioned dormers and cathedral windows, too.

Clocktower Place was developed and built by Landstock, Inc. of Campbell. Owners of single units or suites receive a deed to their purchased areas, share joint ownership in all "common areas" and can occupy, sell or lease their properties at will.

This time I am in agreement with a press release, when it says: "Reflecting a warmth in design which speaks to the cultural and physical surroundings, Clocktower Place."

WAKIDA IN PARADISE

"It's exciting — and scary — but we're doing really well." Takao Wakida was speaking of his photography gallery at Paradise mall, his first business venture.

Wakida is not new in the field of photography, however. He has been doing his own shooting, developing and printing for many years and has exhibited and sold his work at art shows all over the western states. Until recently, he worked for Coast Photo Service in Salinas.

In the mall at Ocean and Dolores, Wakida sells his own photographs, mostly of this area: seascapes, landscapes, the people and animals of the Peninsula. Some are small enough to make modest gifts.

Wakida, whose gallery replaces the House of Windsor, lived in Carmel for about 14 years during the 1960s and worked in Monterey. Then, when employed in Salinas, he and his family moved there. Now Wakida and his wife, Linda, and their four and one-half year old daughter, Natasha, are looking forward to a permanent move back to Carmel.

WE CATCH UP WITH CPI

It started in a back room at the Computer Place on Carmel Rancho Lane in 1978, outgrew its quarters there and for about a year now has occupied "lots of space in which to work and grow even more." CPI, a separate direct mail business, is on Via Nona Marie, in the Carmel Rancho area.

The company came to our attention through its elegant catalogue, which pictures and gives the details about its many different Hewlett-Packard computers and calculators, all available by phone or mail order.

The company also offers interfaces, enhancements, disc drives, printers and other computer "peripherals" as well as a variety of professionally prepared programs. It is an authorized Hewlett-Packard dealership. Owners are Shirley and David Stihler, who also own the Computer Place, where it all started.

Advertising manager Laura Hamilton said the new slim-line programmable calculators, one for scientific uses and one for business, are among CPS's most popular items. A personal office computer for business applications is also a "best seller."

Ms. Hamilton has lived in Carmel 10 years and worked in advertising production before joining CPI.

SUPERLATIVES FOR BALESTRERI

One of the Peninsula's most successful entrepreneurs is to receive national recognition as a "giant of accomplishment."

The title and a Golden Plate Award will be given to Ted Balestreri during the 21st annual Salute of Excellence weekend in New Orleans next month.

Balestreri and 39 other "most outstanding men and women" will be cited by the American Academy of Achievement as inspirations for young people across the country, a number of whom will also be honored as Young Leaders of Tomorrow.

Pebble Beach resident Balestreri, co-owner of the Sardine Factory in Monterey, other restaurants (including Carmel's Butcher Shop) and a large part of Cannery Row which he hopes to develop into "the Riviera of the West," will join a distinguished list of previous Academy honorees. They include Dr. Edward Teller, Jimmy Stewart, Alex Haley, Paul "Bear" Bryant, James Michener and Ed Asner. Asner will serve as the narrator of this year's Golden Plate Awards ceremonies.

PROFESSIONAL HONORS FOR ESTASSI TOO

Sam Estassi, general manager for Mutual of Omaha and United of Omaha in Carmel, recently attended special dedication ceremonies at the Companies' new mutual fund office in Omaha, Neb.

Estassis was selected to attend the event because of his outstanding sales and service record during the first quarter of 1982.

While he was in Omaha, Estassi also participated in meetings to discuss new product lines for the companies. He is a member of their general agents and managers advisory board.

AS IF WE DIDN'T KNOW ...

The word is out that tourism has become California's biggest single industry. Speaking at a meeting of the California Association of Convention and Visitors Bureaus in Monterey recently, Barbara L. Klein, director of the State Office of Tourism, put a $25 billion dollar tag on the industry for 1981.

Ms. Klein reported that 112.5 million visitors came to California last year. She didn't specify how many of those visitors showed up on Ocean Avenue, but she did state that 102.3 million of them made California their final vacation stop.

Another statistic Ms. Klein offered was that in 1981 there was a 5 percent increase in the number of travelers who stayed in private homes rather than hotels or motels. There is also evidence that people are taking both more and shorter trips, usually over a long weekend.

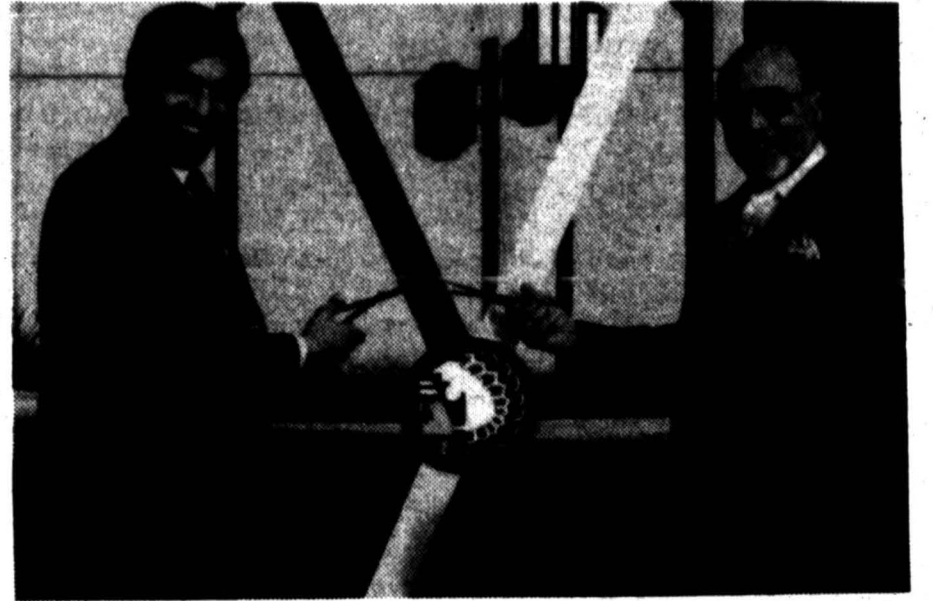

CONSUMER PROTECTION COMES TO REAL ESTATE

On the local scene, realtors have taken a significant step to protect home buyers and sellers "from not just the possibility of inconvenience, but also from potentially thousands of dollars of liability."

That step is establishment of a Consumer Protection Committee. Headed by realtor David Wittrock, the committee includes other realtors, pest control operators, home protection plan underwriters and licensed contractors. A significant part of its role will be public information and education.

CARMEL ... IN LIVING COLOR

Carmel Business Association members who attended the organization's May 6 breakfast meeting were among the first to receive copies of a fine new colored brochure about the Carmel area. Money for its production was allocated from county hotel tax funds in response to a CBA request for funds to print such a brochure.

School district to join lawsuit against state

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

IT IS high time state legislators "put their money where their mouths are," says the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees.

The board is expected to adopt a resolution May 25 that allows it to join school districts across Northern California in a lawsuit aimed to force the legislature to fully fund state-mandated programs.

A second proposed resolution would be sent directly to the legislators and asks them to either fund the mandates fully, relax regulations or allow the district to drop the programs altogether.

The May 25 public hearings on the resolutions will be held at 7 p.m. in Room 2 at Carmel High School, Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue.

Carmel will pay approximately $350 as its share of costs for the suit, which will be filed sometime this year by the San Francisco law firm of Breon, Galgani, Godino and O'Donnell, said Supt. William Rand. Rand said the resolution is necessary because many of the state-required programs are not fully funded, which places a burden on the already financially-strapped district.

"We need to say 'put your money where your mouths are.' I'd like to see the legislature fund the programs they say we have to run," said Trustee Harold Santee.

Santee added that a lawsuit would "put the legislature on notice about the devastating impact" on districts which subsidize the state-mandated programs.

State requirements for the district to offer programs for special education students are a major concern to the district, Rand said.

In the fiscal year 1980-81, the district spend $509,571 on special education programs while the state reimbursement check came to only $462,345 — or $45,226 less than costs. Figures for 1981-82 were unavailable.

Special education is the most frequently mentioned program, but district officials also believe that many other state requirements eat into the budget and thus take money away from the regular school curriculums.

Other state mandated programs that district officials say are costly and which are not reimbursed fully include:

- The free and reduced price meals for needy students program.

- A limit on the size of projects district workers can undertake.

- Provisions for teacher tenure that make it costly to remove those whose performance is deemed inadequate.

- Rules that state certificated employees must be hired on a yearly basis instead of monthly or hourly.

- Stipulations that instructional materials must be provided free to all students.

The resolution that authorizes the Carmel district to enter the lawsuit says that the challenge will be primarily based on provisions included in Prop. 4, which was passed by the voters in 1979 as a follow-up to Prop. 13.

Proposition 4 places limits on expenditures by state and local governments and also includes language that states excess funds must be returned to the taxpayer.

But also included in the proposition are provisions that require the state to reimburse local agencies for mandated programs.

The Carmel resolution claims that "inadequately funded or unfunded mandates at best have the effect of requiring local agencies to divert limited resources from other programs and at worst, will cause serious disruptions to staff and programs..."

Rand told trustees that the $350 could lead to savings in the "thousands of dollars."

A SECOND related resolution would be sent directly to legislators and calls for new laws that would fully fund state-required programs, relax costly regulations or allow the district to drop some of the programs entirely.

A proposed "shopping list" of such state-mandated programs and recommended solutions generated a brief spark of controversy at the May 11 trustees meeting.

Imogene Speiser, president of the Association of Carmel teachers, read a letter to the board that objected to three of the proposals: teacher tenure, contract agreements and paying teachers at an hourly rate.

"Please be reminded that we are professional educators who bring knowledge, experience and strength to the educational programs of the Carmel Unified School District. To be able to teach in a relaxed manner without interference from individual or group biases is a primary prerequisite for effective teaching," she said.

"Tenure laws and teacher contracts were based on protection of civil rights and professional ethics so that school districts could maintain strong professional staffs, thereby educational programs. Teachers should not be subject to economic, personal, religious or social whims of administrators, board members, parents or citizens of the community."

"At this time, when we are asked to pull together and make daily sacrifices on our jobs as well as in our pocketbooks, this proposal seems a lack of support for, and good faith in, the professional staff at CUSD."

Ms. Speiser also diverted from her letter and voiced opposition to a proposal to eliminate or cut the free and reduced priced meals for needy students.

"It is impossible to educate a child who is hungry," she said.

Ms. Speiser added that another proposal that asks the legislature for authorization to charge for some materials is "detrimental to free education." She said poor students would not be able to afford the materials and would then be denied an equal education.

VIRGINIA STANTON, a 44-year Carmel area resident with a lengthy history of service to the community, was presented with the Carmel Rotary Club J.O. Handley Fellow Award at a special luncheon May 12. Making the presentation were: Merv Sutton, president (left); and Dan Tibbitts, chairman of the award committee (center). Mrs. Stanton was honored for "enhancing the living quality of the community." Mrs. Stanton, who was an editor of House Beautiful magazine for 14 years, is the founder of the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross. Her memberships have included: Auxiliary of the Community Hospital, trustee of Community Hospital, California Arts Commission, Monterey Arts Commission, and chairwoman of the Monterey County Committee of the Guide Dogs for the Blind. Her latest interest is the Carraig Company in Salinas, a workshop where the handicapped can make and sell wood products. She has been named "Outstanding Woman of the Year" by several organizations. She is married to Robert Stanton and they have three children, daughters Shannan and Susannah, and son Michael, who are triplets.

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL

May, 1982

Padre Sports Schedule

By Karen Edmonds

The Carmel High School Frosh-Soph Girls Softball Team finished their season in the Mission Trail Athletic League without a loss. When asked of the cause of their success the girls stated enthusiastically and unanimously that the credit should go to their "wonderful coach Jack Ellena and to the friendship between the players."

The team ended the season Wednesday, May 12 with an exciting win over Pacific Grove. Carmel was behind 7-3 in the first inning, but didn't let P.G. get another run. Carmel tied the game 7-7 in the second inning, and finally won 11-7 when Kristen Ellena ran in the last run off a solid hit by Kim Gilpin.

Very pleased with his girls, Coach Ellena said: "Ginger Westcott's pitching record was 8-0, and Susan Ellena's was 5-0. We had excellent hitters. Shawn Sparr really helped us out with her hitting and catching. Penny Wagstaff played at first, and Kristen Ellena played right field; they both helped us out a lot. Ellen Repenning, who played center field was very fast, and had a good arm, so she contributed a lot also. We had four freshman starters that played regularly. The freshman and sophomores got along very well and they listened well also."

The Carmel High School Girls' Softball Club is growing every year. With all of these girls returning next year, we can expect a winning season.

The Carmel High School Varsity Swimming Team took first place in The Southern Conference Supplemental League Championship meet. The Padres scored 517 points, which was some 200 points more than third place team R.L.S., and over 100 points ahead of the second place team Salinas.

Brian Baldwin took first place in the 50 freestyle with a time of 22.52, and Carmel's relay team took first in the 400 free relay with 3:32.60. The relay team was powered by Mark Reardon, John Agan, Mike Hardy and Mike LaFontaine.

Rusty Elsberry, who played on Carmel's Baseball team and was all-league for his pitching is going to school at MPC. Rusty said: "I've really enjoyed Carmel High School, but am looking forward to a change."

Melanie Kagan is going to UCLA and is looking forward to meeting new people, and living in the big city.

Tim Auger is going to U.C. Berkeley for the winter quarter, and is looking forward to time off without school. He plans to spend his time with his family traveling to New York and Mexico, and hunting with his father.

John Franklin is going to Hartnell College. He plans to play baseball for Coach Tony Teresa. John has participated in Carmel High Athletics for four years. He won the Golden Helmet for his play in football, and was made all-league for baseball.

Student Employees

Carmel businesses which need either part-time or full-time summer help should not overlook a very valuable local job source before going outside of the community.

Carmel High School students are interested, willing and in most cases trained to work in a wide variety of positions. If you have a job you think a high school student would be well suited for, give us a call.

The high school maintains a job board which is updated daily. Also, job announcements are listed as they arrive in the student bulletin which is circulated campus-wide.

Anyone who desires to list a job with Carmel High now through June 14 need only contact David Winter at 624-3544, in the Career Center. Let's work together to employ our local youth!

Carmel High principal's message

By Marsha Kading

It hardly seems possible that this year is so quickly drawing to a close. It has been so memorable for me, and I hope that it has been significant for you and your students as well. Many of our final activities will involve giving recognition for excellence. We were delighted to learn that our own Lloyd Baskerville was awarded the Allen Griffin Teaching Award and acclaimed as master teacher.

In addition to receiving a beautiful plaque yesterday, Mr. Baskerville was presented with a monetary award. We are so proud to have him among us. The staff and students at Carmel High have always known that Lloyd is a master teacher — we are glad that others recognize his great talent, too.

We are also extremely proud of our two finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition: Jim Costain and John Parsons. Other outstanding students will be recognized at our annual awards assembly to be held on May 27 in our gym. Please join us to honor these students.

We are excited about plans for graduation, which will be held at four o'clock in the afternoon on June 11 on our football field. Seniors and their parents have been quite involved in the planning process, and we have come up with a format of which you and the community will be very proud. You are all cordially invited to share the commencement ceremony with us.

As you know, seniors must have passed our high school competency tests in order to graduate. We have been very privileged to have several parent volunteers spend a great deal of time on the campus helping individual students master the skills needed to pass these examinations. We thank Mrs. Sharon Giraudo and Mrs. Bitten Falge for the hours they have spent with our students.

This particular effort is only one example of the consistent caring and support shown by Carmel High parents. Without your efforts, our programs would not be so successful. Additionally, members of the Carmel High School staff have put in many extra hours working with individual students and programs since they too have a tremendous stake in the success of our students.

One of the most significant components of our school program has been the enthusiastic involvement of our A.S.B. and class officers. The activities planned and carried out by them during the entire year have created an atmosphere of respect and responsibility. Efforts were made to involve as many students as possible in some activity on campus. The students' own personal growth, under the tutelage of Joe Feldeisen, has been an absolute joy to observe.

Educating our children is without a doubt our most important responsibility. The school and family working together will achieve this goal.

Students seek awards

As graduation grows nearer and nearer, students are frantically working to gain their credits for graduation. Although we all have enjoyed the time we have spent at Carmel Valley High School, we are waiting very impatiently to graduate.

One of the highlights of our graduation is the Valli Cook Award. The Valli Cook Award is given to a student who excels in creative writing. All of the teachers submit any outstanding work done by their students to our English teacher, Leslie Holt. She reviews all the papers and makes the final decision. We wish the students the best of luck.

We would like to take the time to thank the staff of Carmel Valley High School for their support, patience, and understanding: Principal Jim Kohnke; Secretary Rosemary Broderick; English teacher Leslie Holt; math teacher Bruce Standard; and social studies teacher Blake Fuessenich. We couldn't have done it without you.

Our graduation ceremonies will be held at the Carmel Valley High School campus on June 9, 1982, at 5 p.m.

YORK SCHOOL MAYFAIRE BALL A SMASHING SUCCESS

Entering the Corral de Tierra Country Club last Saturday evening was like stepping into another era — of kings, queens, dukes, duchesses, knights and court jesters. It was a magical evening of entertainment, a gourmet dinner and a presentation of special awards to some very special people.

The affair was the annual York School Mayfaire Ball and more than 100 people attended the festive gala.

The cocktail hour included delicious hors d'oeuvres and music by the York Chamber Group, a harpist, an Olde English recorder and a Scottish piper.

The "grand ballroom" was decorated with 10, six-foot, batik banners that were hand-made by York students, faculty, parents, associates and friends. Regal table settings of red and white flowers and handmade silk roses represented the York colors.

Before a delicious seven course dinner was served, the Rev. Peter Farmer, York School chaplain, gave the invocation. Chairpersons Jean and Safa Cicin, parents club co-presidents, officially welcomed the guests.

The feast of the evening included Veloute de Champignons en Croute, Cote de Boeuf, Pommes Duchesse, Jardiniere de Legumes, Salade verte, Cerises Flambees Jubilee, Cafe noir and Vin.

Awards were presented by Mayfaire Chairwoman Carol Cech; Ed Galloway, board president; and Henry Littlefield, headmaster, to Lord and Lady Cicin, York Parents of the Year; Lady Carol Cech, Mayfaire Award; Lord (Dr. George) Bishop, Headmaster Award; Lord and Lady Ryu, Ehrman and Doyle, York Alumni Parents of the Year.

Lord Little was given the Grandparent of the Year Award; Lady Coats, York Associate of the Year; Lord and Lady Higgins were given the President's Award.

Following the awards presentations almost everyone took to the dance floor for a bit of toe-tapping to the mid-century music of John Daly and his Big Band until the witching hour of midnight.

The tremendous success of the ball is shared by parents, associates, students, alumni parents, grandparents, faculty, staff, special friends, sponsors, patrons and local businesses. All proceeds from the event will go toward the York School scholarship fund and will be matched with funds from the Maurine Church Coburn Charitable Trust grant.

At York, 35 percent of the total budget must be raised outside the school because of major scholarship and endowment funding programs. This year, nearly one half of the students receive some form of scholarship aid, and seniors go on to the nation's best colleges and universities.

The school recognizes special friends and members of the York Family each year at the Mayfaire, and at Founders Day held in the early Fall.

TOM BLEECKER HAS A WINNER

If you think the movie "Star Wars" was terrific — just wait until you see Tom Blecker's new script come to life on the silver screen. Almost everybody likes a good story but yours truly refused to go out to dinner on her own birthday until she had turned the last page of the martial arts action thriller.

I'm not alone in my praise of Tom's work. Movie producer-director Blake Edwards (he's married to Julie Andrews, remember?) is so hot on "The Judan Mission" (yep, that's the title) that even though shooting on the movie hasn't even started, he's already hired Tom and his writing buddy, Cliff Ralke, to write a sequel — and that's a movie history first!

I'm so high on the work that I almost forgot to tell you that goodlooking Tom is home in Carmel following five months of pounding the typewriter in Smog City. Actually he and Cliff wrote the script in just over 60 days — and that's working!

Tom, who has been involved in and taught martial arts for years, uses his knowledge well in the script. One's mind reels with intrigue as one mentally travels with a small team of martial art experts who have developed the arts to the Nth degree. They do for the U.S. government what no one else could possibly do. You'll just have to wait for the movie but if you see Tom around town — shake his hand.

ANOTHER CARMELITE LEAVES HIS MARK

Bill Dodge has never had an art lesson in his life, but if you've got it, flaunt it! Truthfully, Bill isn't the type to beat his own drum, but not only is he an unusually good artist — he's making a darn good living at it.

Bill loves to paint cities and last year he did one of San Francisco called "Circus City." Naif International, one of the largest publishers of primitive art in the world, saw Bill's work and signed him to a contract. Now he travels in style to various cities to paint his masterpieces — the latest being a three month trip to New York where he painted two special scenes of the city. Both were on display at Art Expo-New York at the Coliseum April 22-26 — and Bill was asked to introduce the works. Beginning Memorial weekend the paintings will be on display in Bill's gallery in the Court of the Fountain.

One of the works is titled "Identified Flying Objects over Broadway" and shows Peter Pan, Wendy and John playing in the skies over the city of bright lights.

The other work is titled "Ruth Warrick Goes To Work." Ruth, as "soap" lovers know, plays Phoebe Tyler in the daytime serial "All My Children" — and in the painting you can see Ruth in a taxi (one of many in the painting) studying her script. Not only did Bill meet Ruth — they went to dinner and did a mean disco in various clubs around town.

Bill, who owned a marketing consulting firm for many years, has "dabbled" in art (and sold everything he ever painted) for more than 20 years but it was just five years ago that he decided to turn it into his livelihood. He still has a home in San Francisco but about a year ago he and his recently widowed mom, Bernice, moved to Carmel. Bernice loves working in the gallery; Bill spends most of his time traveling and painting.

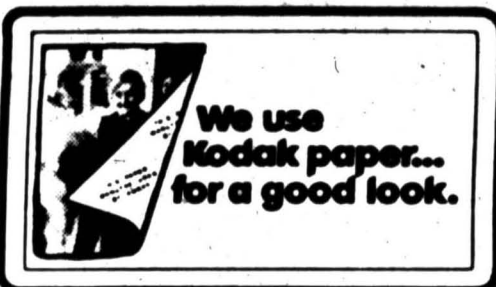

He said he thoroughly enjoyed his time in New York and found time to catch Cher in "Come Back To The Five And Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean." He also got hooked on Grand Central Terminal's famous oyster bar, and before learning better, he ordered one of each oyster on the menu and ended up with 22 of the sea critters as an appetizer! He became a "regular" and freely admits that it cost about $34 just to eat at the counter.

Well, it could happen to any of us since the various foods are flown in from all over the world on a daily basis and the restaurant is rated the best in the world by the London Times and the greatest in America by the New York Times.

Almost forgot to mention that Bill's "Circus City" poster (with the first edition of 5000 copies sold out) has been chosen

CARMELO ELEMENTARY SCHOOL STAFF APPRECIATION LUNCHEON

The Carmelo Parent Faculty Club Board honored the Carmelo Elementary School staff with an appreciation luncheon on Tuesday, May 4. The annual spring luncheon is a tradition at Carmelo but will come to a close this spring as the 134-year-old school will close at the end of this school term and the students will be transferred to Tularcitos or River schools.

The event was planned by Peggy Harding who made cherry cheesecake -- which just happens to be the favorite dessert of school principal (and fifth grade teacher) Paul Sheckler.

Spring bouquets created by Kathy Maggiore decorated the dining tables. Staff members enjoyed an array of gourmet salads, barbecued turkey and tempting desserts.

KAREN MASON ACCEPTED TO MARIN CIVIC BALLET

Sixteen-year-old Karen Mason, a senior at Carmel High School, has been accepted into the advanced level of Marin Civic Ballet in San Rafael.

Karen has been studying ballet for seven years and worked extra hard to complete her high school studies in three, rather than the usual four years, so that she could continue her dance studies at an earlier age. She plans to live with a family in Marin so that she won't have to waste time commuting.

Karen is the daughter of Harold and Sue Mason of Carmel. Her dad is a local artist and her mom works as administrative assistant at All Saints' Day School in Carmel Valley. She has one brother, David, 19, a freshman at Cal Poly in San Luis Obispo.

Congratulations and keep up the good work, Karen!

Dallas Albert Fargo

You can tell when he's mad because, according to his mom, "he snorts like a little bull." All the more reason why his name, Dallas Albert Fargo, suits him just fine.

Dallas is the son of Bruce and Barbara Fargo of Carmel. He was born at Community Hospital on April 23 at 7:19 a.m. He weighed in at eight pounds, three ounces, was 19.5 inches long and has blond hair and large blue eyes.

He was given an excited welcome by his brother, Free, who will be eight years old in June. Also welcoming the newest Fargo are his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Fargo of Grand Prairie, Tex. and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods of Memphis, Tenn.

Grandma Sylvia arrived from Texas for a six-week visit just one day before Dallas made his appearance three days early. She's lending her loving services to the family's needs as well as keeping the rocking chair moving.

Dallas received his first name because his parents moved to Carmel from Dallas just one year ago. Had he been a girl, he would have been named "Callie" after the state of California.

Dallas' dad runs the family business (Charco-Sketch) with shops in Carmel and also on Cannery Row. His mom, a flight attendant for Delta Airlines, is on a leave of absence until September.

Is Dallas a good boy? Well, if you ask his mom or grandmother the answer: "He's adorable and good." But if you ask his dad the answer is: "When he's wet, hungry or dirty he's a grouch -- and that's most of the time!"

Hang in there Dallas. It looks as if you have the whole world wrapped around your little finger!

Michael Everett Heisinger

He's the pride of the Heisinger family. He has red hair like his father and his grandfather before him. His California heritage in his grandma Heisinger's side goes back to the Big Sur area during the 1880s.

This lucky young man, Michael Everett Heisinger, is the son of James and Pamela Heisinger of Carmel. He was born at Community Hospital on April 25 at 8:34 p.m. He weighed five pounds, five ounces and was 18.5 inches long.

His proud grandparents are James and Rosemary Heisinger of Carmel and Mrs. Patricia Duncan of Capitola.

The one thing that he's going to have to live down is that he was so excited about the baby shower given his mom by Nancy Roberts, that five minutes after the affair got underway, he decided to join the world. All the guests trooped to the hospital and hostess Nancy furnished the champagne.

Without a doubt, he will remember that he didn't give his doctor time to arrive, so he was delivered by a very capable nurse while his dad gave encouragement to his mom.

Michael's dad is an attorney who at one time worked for the Carmel Pine Cone. He has this to say about his son: "I'm proud! He's cute. He's a teaser. And he's a fighter who loves to 'punch around.'"

Mom Pam is taking all of Michael's antics in stride and has temporarily retired from the business world to spend time with the baby.

You welcomed yourself pretty well, Michael, so all we can add is that we hope you like it here!

Noah and Morgan Wilson

DOUBLE WORK -- DOUBLE LOVE

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Wilson of Carmel are the proud parents of twins born at Community Hospital on March 9.

Son Noah Andrew was born at 5:02 p.m., weighed six pounds, two ounces and was 19.5 inches long. He has brown hair and blue eyes.

Daughter Morgan Lewis was born at 5:22 p.m., weighed four pounds, two ounces and was 17.5 inches long. She also has brown hair and blue eyes.

Having undergone a special medical test, Mrs. Wilson was aware that she would have twins. The babies were born naturally and dad, an architect, was right there to lend support.

The babies' grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wilson of Prescott Valley, Arizona and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith of Berkeley.

Mrs. Wilson says the babies are doing just fine and "growing like weeds."

Father Farrell's wisdom

Carmel Rotary May 12, 1982

Last week I saw a cartoon which showed a harassed mother being embraced by a florist, a jeweler and Ma Bell as they shouted "Happy Mother's Day."

Once a year Americans officially honor mothers as they mouth every cliché about the glories of Motherhood. It would be humorous if mothers were not so tragically neglected for the rest of the year.

Twice a year Carmel Rotary Club, which has been called a bastion of male chauvenism, honors Rotary Anns. However, every day of the year should be Mother's Day and a day to honor Rotary Anns.

Wall-to-wall carpets, clever gadgets and gimmicks make a model house but it needs a good woman to make a model home. Wives and mothers make it click.

On Mother's Day, like Greeks bearing gifts, we trot out the "three C's" "candy, cards and carnations, together with the fourth "C," a hidden contract to go on working for the other 364 days without complaint, recognition or thanks. Nothing is more irritating than to be taken for granted. We do just that until a wife or mother does the one really selfish and harsh thing in her life - she dies and leaves us.

So within the dubious shadow of Mother's Day, Carmel Rotary honors all wives and mothers. We place upon their worried brows the golden halo they have worn in days of bright joy and dark sorrow. We accompany this with a surprise verging on the miraculous. We go on public record stating that we do appreciate you and thank you for being you. With gratitude we place you in the gentle hands of the Good Shepherd and His Mother, Mary. Firmly we emblazon on your escutcheon with a four letter word, L-O-V-E, "love!"

Mayor has office hours

Mayor Charlotte Townsend will hold informal office hours two afternoons each week: Monday and Wednesday from 1:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. Carmelites who want to meet and talk with the mayor can come to city hall (Monte Verde south of Ocean) without appointment at those times. Or appointments can be made for other hours through city clerk Jeanne Kettelkamp.

Council to appeal Valley development permit

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL City Council will appeal to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors a use permit for a 20,000 sq. ft. office building at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

The council acted in executive session before its regular meeting Tuesday at Carmel City Hall, on the advice of City Atty. George Brehmer.

Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon granted the use permit May 13 to allow Paul Kagan and Associates of Carmel to construct the office building at Nona Marie Avenue and Clock Tower Place in the Carmel Rancho Post Office subdivision.

Appeal of the decision by the zoning administrator will be based on a contention that issuance of the use permit would be a violation of the court-imposed moratorium on discretionary building in Carmel Valley.

That moratorium is in effect until the Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised in light of an environmental impact report and readopted by the board of supervisors.

In a prior communication with the board of supervisors, the Carmel City Council pointed out what it deemed 16 separate violations of the building moratorium in permits issued by the county at the mouth of the Valley.

Brehmer said he advised the council Tuesday that, unless it acted on the latest permit approval, it should forget about further challenges to the county on development in that unincorporated area.

An appeal of the zoning administrator's decision must be filed within 10 days after receipt of written notice of the approval, or within 15 days after the decision, according to Deputy Monterey County Counsel Jose Ramos.

Slimmon said the site where Kagan Associates wants to construct an office building is already zoned for professional offices, and pointed out that two use permits already have been approved for development there, although construction has not started.

"The zoning administrator, in his decision to approve the use permit, relied on the same county counsel's advice upon which he relied in all prior permits approved at the mouth of the Valley," Brehmer told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"That advice is that the mouth of the Valley has been planned for concentrated commercial development since 1957, and therefore issuance of the permits didn't increase the building intensity in a manner prohibited by law."

But Brehmer said approval of any permit which would allow development to proceed in Carmel Valley is a discretionary act specifically prohibited by the court moratorium.

"MY POSITION is that the moratorium judgement prohibited any discretionary permits which would result in buildings to be actually constructed," Brehmer said.

"The fact that plans were approved many years ago is not a basis to allow this permit. The upshot of all this is that if nothing is done to challenge or appeal the issuance of the Kagan use permit, in effect that would say the county can go ahead and issue permits for all the lots at the mouth of the Valley."

All of the permits for development at the mouth of the Valley to which the Carmel City Council previously voiced an objection — with the exception of the Kagan permit — were approved before the court-ordered moratorium, Ramos indicated.

In other business, the city council took sweeping measures to control problems with crowds, litter, traffic and beach fires on the Fourth of July.

The council defeated a motion by Councilman David Maradei 3-2 to prohibit all fireworks from Carmel Beach, and left intact the city ordinance that permits use of "Safe and Sane" fireworks — only on the beach but nowhere else in the village.

Restrictions on the size of bonfires were enacted at the suggestion of City Atty. George Brehmer. Beach fires south of Ocean Avenue must be at least 25 feet from from walls, vegetation, or other combustible materials.

Fires may not have an accumulation of combustible material higher than two feet from the base, nor more than four feet horizontally; flames may not be higher than five feet.

"I'm not looking to ban the Fourth of July," Maradei said when he suggested a ban on both fireworks and beach fires. "I'm saying we should step back from this problem for a few years. I would ban fires and fireworks, not for all time, but for the time it takes to save our beach."

Parking will be prohibited from 8 a.m. to midnight on Independence Day, except for emergency vehicles, commercial vehicles making residential deliveries, or handicapped persons' vehicles.

Areas where parking is prohibited on both sides of the street are: Santa Lucia from Camino Real to Scenic Drive, the entire length of Scenic Drive and the entire length of San Antonio, 13th Avenue from Scenic to Carmelo, 8th Avenue from Scenic to San Antonio, Ocean Avenue from Scenic to Camino Real.

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will elect a new chairman and vice chairman and appoint new committees when it meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, May 26 at city hall. The commission officially seated new member Richard Barrett last night (May 19). Barrett replaced Robert Stephenson, who was elected to the city council. Commissioners Arthur Mertens (left) and James Wright (right) were also re-appointed and took their seats last night.

Carmel library lays off staff; more cuts may come

city resident patrons if a compromise is not reached.

Ms. Richter said the latest proposals to cut the Carmel library budget will not stop the fee to non-city resident patrons.

Library Board President Francis Herrick said he does not see how the budget can be cut without a reduction in staff hours.

Herrick was also hesitant to discuss the layoff. "This was not on public record. There is a limit to the specifics that I can appropriately tell," he said.

Herrick did say that the layoff was "no reflection on the work" of the children's librarian.

"It's perfectly obvious that there was no significant way to cut without making a reduction in staff," he said. "It was most unpleasant, but it was something we had to face."

HERRICK SAID the board decided that a staff reorganization was necessary, but that a "last hired, first fired" position would not be effective.

"It was a matter of trying to work out a reorganization of the services in terms of the use," Herrick said.

Herrick said there has been an increase in demand in the reference department and circulation departments. However, there has been a decline in the demand for children's library services.

"We couldn't help but recognize that the children's library services demand is not becoming larger," he said. "I feel strongly that we need children's library services, but we had to cut back."

TRUSTEES of the Harrison Memorial Library say library services for youngsters

Herrick and Richter both said the layoff will not be detrimental to the program.

"From the public point of view, these services will go along without a very visible change," Herrick said.

By closing on Sundays, the library would save between $5,000 and $7,000 annually, it is estimated.

Ms. Richter said other library employees will assume the children's librarian duties.

will not be adversely affected by the layoff of the fulltime children's librarian.

Ms. Richter said that even if the county came through with a full reimbursement, she would not recommend keeping the fulltime children's librarian position.

"We're looking down the road and saying we're not going to receive the same amount of money," she said.

Ms. Richter predicted that even if the county grants the full reimbursement to the library this year, there are no assurances for future years.

Although the city funded more than half of the $429,000 library budget for 1981-82, there are also no assurances that the city council is willing to increase that amount.

City Finance Director Jim Bajari said he plans to have a preliminary figure for council consideration ready sometime next week.

Trustees and former board president Pat Faul said part of the budget problem could be blamed on Prop. 13.

"You could call it Prop. 13 coming home to roost," she said, referring to now-ended state "bailouts" that kept local budgets afloat after the loss of property tax revenues.

The library board may have the city budget information by May 25, and it could make a difference on a final decision on the Sunday closing and number of staff cutbacks.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said she is not sure whether the city has the resources to make up for lost revenues to the library.

"I would like to see citizen input on where our priorities are," she said. Mrs. Townsend said the city has always placed the library "very high" on a funding priority list.

Mrs. Townsend said it is a "foregone conclusion" that the county will cut reimbursements. The mayor also questioned what effect the budget cutbacks would have on the proposed library annex.

Trustees have a $700,000 fund to pay for an annex, but the money can only be legally used for the building, Ms. Richter said.

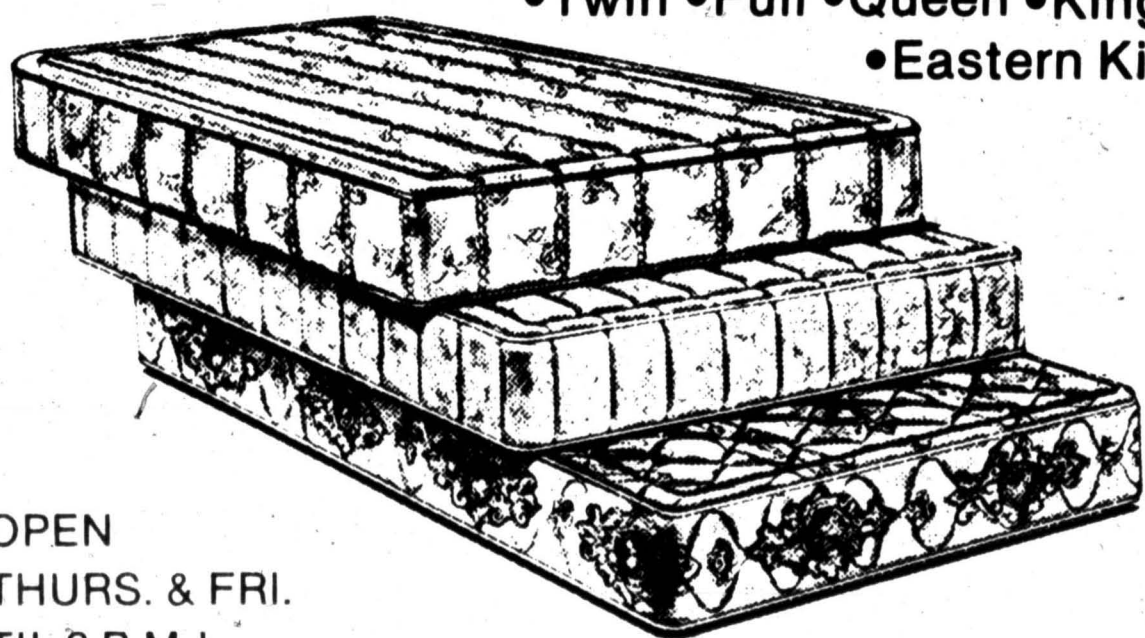

Ms. Richter also pointed out that "even if we had the ground breaking today" it would be at least two years before the annex could open.

JACK NICKLAUS, "The Golden Bear," fresh from his first victory in nearly two years at the Colonial National Invitational Tournament, will try to stay on the winning track at the 1982 United States Open Golf Championship June 17-20 at Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Nicklaus will have some tough competition, including defending champion David Graham, arch-rival Arnold Palmer, Johnny Miller and current U.S. Amateur Champion Nathaniel Crosby.

U.S. Open draws a crowded field

A record of 5,255 entries have been received for the 1982 United States Open Golf Championship to be played June 17-20 at Pebble Beach Golf Links, according to the U.S. Golf Association.

For the first time in Open history (the June tourney is the 82nd event), entries surpassed the 5,000 mark. The previous record of 4,946 entries were received for last year's Open, played at the Merion, Pa., Golf Club. It also represents a gain of 1,059 entries over the 1972 Open played at Pebble Beach.

David Graham, the defending champion, heads a list of 50 players who are exempt from both the local qualifying rounds in May and the Sectional Qualifying Championships in June. This list also includes former U.S. Open champions Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller, Hale Irwin, Jerry Pate, Hubert Green and Andy North, and current U.S. Amateur Champion Nathaniel Crosby.

Nicklaus is exempt in five categories, the most among all entrants. Both Graham and Tom Watson are exempt in four categories. Irwin, Pate, Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler and Bill Rogers are exempt in three categories each.

The remaining 5,205 entrants must compete in one or both series of qualifying rounds to earn their places in the starting field at Pebble Beach.

Sixty-five players, including former U.S. Open champions Gene Littler, Orville Moody and Lou Graham, and former U.S.

Amateur champions William C. Campbell (the current president of the USGA) and Fred Riley, are exempt from the local qualifying rounds — 36 holes stroke play — which will be conducted at 61 locations around the country between May 20-25.

The remaining 5,140 will compete for the 535 qualifiers' places and the opportunity to advance to the Sectional Qualifying Championships — also 36 holes stroke play — which will be held at 12 locations between June 4-8. The 535 local qualifiers and the 65 players exempt from local qualifying will compete for the 103 available places in the Championship proper. The sectional qualifiers and the 50 exempt players will comprise the starting field of 153 contestants at Pebble Beach.

Film review:Handsome escapist fantasy

By LISA JENSEN

Conan the Barbarian. With Arnold Schwarzenegger, James Earl Jones and Sandahl Bergman. Written by John Milius and Oliver Stone. Directed by John Milius. A Universal release.

With the current vogue for "sword 'n' sorcery," Conan is a natural for the big screen. It took four years and $30 million to make and the result is a lusty, bloodthirsty spectacle that remains faithful to the mystique of blood, sex and physical power that has kept young males enthralled for so many generations.

The film pays close attention to the basic ingredients of myth-making. The boy Conan is taught "the discipline of steel" by his master swordmaker father, then sees his village destroyed and his parents murdered by a marauding tribe led by evil, hypnotic Thulsa Doom (James Earl Jones). Grown to considerable manhood as a slave laborer, Conan becomes a success at gladiatorial pit fighting and is sent east for training in martial arts, poetry, philosophy and sex.

His education complete, Conan is ready to begin his heroics — seducing a witch, stealing treasures and maiming villains. He finds stalwart companions in the wily Mongolian thief Subotai (Gerry Lopez), an eccentric wizard (Mako), and a bold lover in the beautiful bandit-swordswoman Valeria (Sandahl Bergman). But above all, Conan has a Quest, his burning thirst for revenge against Doom, now the leader of the mystical cult of Set.

Conan's world comes to the screen with all its ripe exotica intact. The action is quite violent (although some of the most gruesome bloodletting has been cut from this "R" print) and the love scenes simmer with burnished sensuality.

Ron Cobb's voluptuous production design quotes liberally from the work of fantasy artist Frank Frazetta (whose paperback covers sparked the Conan revival of the sixties) and the stylistic details of ancient Celtic, Nordic and Asian motifs. The movie teems with bazaars, orgy chambers, giant snakes, eerie demons and terrifying transformations.

The casting of athletes in the principal roles also pays off (Lopez is a surfer, Bergman a dancer). Conan himself isn't that charismatic and he's not much of a thinker; when Milius tries to show his philosophical side, we get ponderous shots of Conan staring into space, frowning his massive brow. But you can't argue with Schwarzenegger's heroic physique (especially in the striking black-and-white body paint Conan wears into battle), and, unburdened by much dialog, he brings credible primitive nobility to the role. But Bergman (despite her flat American accent) really steals the show as statuesque Valeria, every inch Conan's equal in strength, grace and fierce independence.

But occasionally, Milius (who rewrote Oliver Stone's original script) fumbles the film's tone. Comic effects like Conan punching out a camel are often too broad, and some dialog is hilariously anachronistic ("Two or three years ago, they were just another snake cult..."). Other lines moronically repeat a single idea over and over again ("the children of Doom. Doom's children...") "They will be afraid of the dark. They will fear the night." And although it's a powerful image, the enormous wheel to which the slave Conan is chained throughout his adolescence doesn't seem to have any specific function; it's a torture prop left over from some cheap Italian gladiator movie.

The scrabbled, Moogie-like flower children of the Set cult seem ludicrously out of place in this barbaric realm, and it's disturbing that Milius attacks them not for their mindless allegiance to their guru, but for their disdain for violence. When Conan bashes an apparently homosexual cult member, it's supposed to be a big joke. In fact, Milius' warped obsession with the "glory" of violence and his consistent equation of physical strength with moral superiority leaves a bitter taste throughout the film.

However, Milius' sense of historical pageantry elevates Conan off the comic page and gives the film its mythic stature. Conan the Barbarian lacks the concern for humanistic ideals that made Excalibur so powerfully complex, but it's a handsomely made escapist fantasy that's not to be taken too seriously, and it should please the Barbarian's legion of fans.

What's playing at the movies

Bambi: The perennially popular animated creation of the Disney studios. The story of a little fawn and his adventures as he grows into a majestic stag. Rated G. At the Dream Theater.

Chariots of Fire: Oscar winner for the best movie of 1981. A wealthy Jewish boy becomes a star runner and a Scots missionary sprints for the glory of God. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough.

Conan The Barbarian: Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in this mythical movie based on pulp magazine tales of the 1930s. Many technical effects throughout the film. Rated R. At the Cinema 70.

Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid: Steve Martin and Carl Reiner at their creative best. One of the funniest movies without a doubt. Spoof of '40s private eye flicks in which Martin roams through adventures that have him talking and scheming with such screen idols as James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Veronica Lake and Bette Davis, in film clips from some of their classic movies. Rated G. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Death Trap: An Edgar Wallace mystery film in England in 1960. A girl, played by Barbara Shelly, learns her deceased sister drew some money from the bank before her death, but it seems to have disappeared. Albert Lieven also stars. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

Fighting Back: Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Missing: A distraught father played by Jack Lemmon searches for his son, Charles Horman who has disappeared following the military coup that overthrew the Allende government in Chile in 1973. His daughter-in-law is played by Sissy Spacek. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Partners: The oddest team on the squad and the funniest cops in America. Benson is the cop who wants to clean up the streets. His partner just wants to redecorate. Ryan O'Neal and John Hurt portray police officers masquerading as a gay couple in order to track down a homophile killer. At the Valley Cinema.

Porky's: A ribald comedy of adolescence in the '50's directed by Bob Clark. The title is derived from the name of a notorious redneck dive to which six teenagers are hypnotically drawn in the belief that they can purchase carnal experience on its premises. A youthful comedy which is a showcase for the six talented actors. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Quest For Fire: If you loved Chewbacca, you'll go ape over Naoh, Gau and Ika in this film. A story about early man and our beginning. Many strange beasts of prehistoric times such as vicious saber-toothed tigers and Indian elephants. There are some scenes to make you laugh, whether intentional or not. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

The Road Warrior: An extraordinary mythological tale, full of exciting action sequences and suspense. Mel Gibson (the dark-haired soldier of "Gallipoli") stars as an invincible hero of a barren and lawless wasteland. Rated R. At the Regency.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A movie about two teenagers and a transvestite from another planet. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theatre.

Shoot The Moon: Albert Finney plays George Dunlap, a big-deal sports-writer, and Diane Keaton is his wife Faith; after 15 years of marriage they part, but are still held together by the past they have shared. This is one of the best movies about an American family made in years. Dana Hill plays the oldest daughter, Sherry. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre.

The Sword and The Sorcerer: A fantasy adventure of the Dark Ages about a mysterious hero fighting against a medieval sorcerer and an evil king. Lots of battle scenes, dungeons, dragons, wizards and witches, damsels and desire and a warrior caught between. Starring Lee Horsely, Kathleen Beller. Rated R. At the Dream Theatre.

Farrell, instructor of guitar at Monterey Peninsula College and Santa Catalina School, was born in Salzburg and has resided in Carmel since 1973. He began his studies at the age of eight and has developed a mastery of classical guitar that has brought significant recognition. Farrell is well known for his dynamic performances and his sensitive, warm interpretations of classical, romantic and contemporary guitar compositions.

GUITARIST TERENCE FARRELL of Carmel will be honored at an album signing party at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, May 23 at Do Re Mi Music in The Barnyard. The party is in celebration of the release of Sketches, Farrell's second album.

THE WORKS OF CARMEL composer Guy Horn are featured on one complete side of Sketches, a newly released album by Terrence Farrell. Sketches was released under the auspices of the Yehudi Menuhin Foundation, which supports new works by composers.

Farrell has performed throughout North America and in England, Ireland, Spain, Germany and Hong Kong. He has enjoyed expanding recognition from music critics.

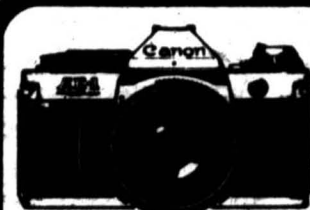

Among the honors Farrell has received are awards in competitions at the University of Washington, Palm Springs Opera Guild, and the Monterey Jazz Festival. Playing with chamber groups and orchestras, his "stylish, forceful, tonally alive and vibrant musicianship" earned him European and Asian premieres and a command performance for former President Gerald Ford.

Sketches, produced by Orion records, was released under the auspices of the Yehudi Menuhin Foundation which supports new works by composers.

Guy Horn, guitarist, composer and teacher, has composed all the pieces on side one of the record. He has performed as a soloist in chamber music ensembles and as a recording artist for the film industry.

Horn received his early training in music from his father. Later he studied counterpoint and musical form with Dr. Wesley La Violette, harmony with Dr. Alfred Butler of Schola Cantorum of Paris, and orchestration with Vernon Leftwich of the Royal Conservatory in London.

Champagne and refreshments will be served at the album signing party. The public is welcome at no charge.

Yuan Memorial exhibit opens at Winters Gallery

The eighth annual S.C. Yuan Memorial Exhibition will be displayed at the Winters Gallery, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel, through June 14. Previous shows since 1974 include a major retrospective with which Yuan was honored at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and exhibits at the Carmel Art Association, Marjorie Evans Gallery and Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach.

In 1971 a Yuan painting was added to the permanent collection of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. A companion piece to A Distant View of Monterey Bay is displayed at the Carmel branch of Northern California Savings and Loan. Several of the paintings in the current exhibit have not previously been shown. These are identified as some of Yuan's greatest achievements.

Although he won many awards for his work, he kept no record of them, believing that "the work should speak for itself." The seal with which he signed some of his paintings translates as "There is no name" — a subtle, simultaneous expression of modesty and achievement.

Si Chen Yuan was born in Hanchow, China, an east coast region resembling the scenic beauties of Switzerland.

Yuan grew up in a difficult period. China was going through endless civil war and revolution, followed by the Sino-Japanese War and, ultimately, World War II.

Miraculously, he was able to survive and his all-consuming passion for painting emerged.

He was fond of drawing and painting since childhood, but his formal studies began in high school with basic black and white drawing. At the Central University of Nanking he studied under Professor Peon Ju, a contemporary master of his day.

In 1949 Yuan came to the United States as a tourist and decided to stay. He moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1951 and for a brief period taught Mandarin Chinese at the Defense Language Institute. His obsession with painting, however, had to be obeyed and he continued to paint.

In 1963 Yuan made his first trip to Europe, followed by several other journeys. He traveled and painted in Mexico, where he found lasting inspiration from the scenery and people, commenting that Mexico was "the land for artists."

With profound dedication and discipline and a subtle, sensitive and subdued palette, Yuan created a legacy of paintings rich in beauty and tranquility. He chose always to express his complex inner emotions and memories rather than merely illustrating them. His paintings are marked by a love and openness which he found difficult to express in any other way.

During his lifetime, S.C. Yuan was honored with numerous one-man exhibits in San Francisco, New York, Boston, Oklahoma, Texas and elsewhere in the the United States. The exhibition at Winters Gallery was organized by Joan Winters and Jen Chi Yuan (Mrs. S.C. Yuan).

The Winters Gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. For further information, phone 625-1281.

LINE DRAWINGS and oil paintings of a variety of subjects by the late S.C. Yuan are on view at the Eighth Annual S.C. Yuan Memorial Exhibition at Winters Gallery, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel. The artist's works have been widely exhibited in California and on the East Coast.

Museum offers series of summer art classes

A course in watercolor techniques will be a highlight of the summer art classes offered by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Marie Brumund, well-known painter and teacher, will lead the new course.

Miss Brumund was graduated from Mills College in 1973 with an MFA degree. Her work has been exhibited at the Kathryn Markel Gallery in New York City and at Leah Levy Gallery in San Francisco. It is now also shown at the Achenbach Gallery of the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco.

The watercolor technique class will meet from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. on eight consecutive Mondays beginning June 7 at the museum.

Subjects will include problems of technique, manipulation and the control of materials in the watercolor medium. In addition to directing the student's attention toward an understanding of craft, areas for projects and discussion will include: understanding transparent and opaque pigment, combining colors, laying washes, investigating brush technique, experimentation with different papers and exploring varied views of painting from a historic perspective. One of the main objectives of the course will be to learn how to apply color washes with ease, speed and certainty. The class will work at the museum and at outside locations.

George De Groat, the artist-in-residence at the museum, will conduct the usual summer program of art classes. This year, the classes will run for eight weeks instead of six as in the past.

Courses to be offered are: The Principles of Painting (Tuesdays); Advanced Drawing (Thursdays); Life Drawing (Fridays). These classes will also meet one day a week from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The eight-week session begins June 8 and concludes July 30. Tuition for all courses is $95 for eight sessions.

For further information, phone Anne Clothier at the museum, 372-7591.

Shakespeare, animals are subjects of films

The intermingling of unrelated animal species and the life of Shakespeare will be the subjects of two short films shown at the Brown Bag Cinema Series today, Thursday, May 20 at Sunset Center, Carmel.

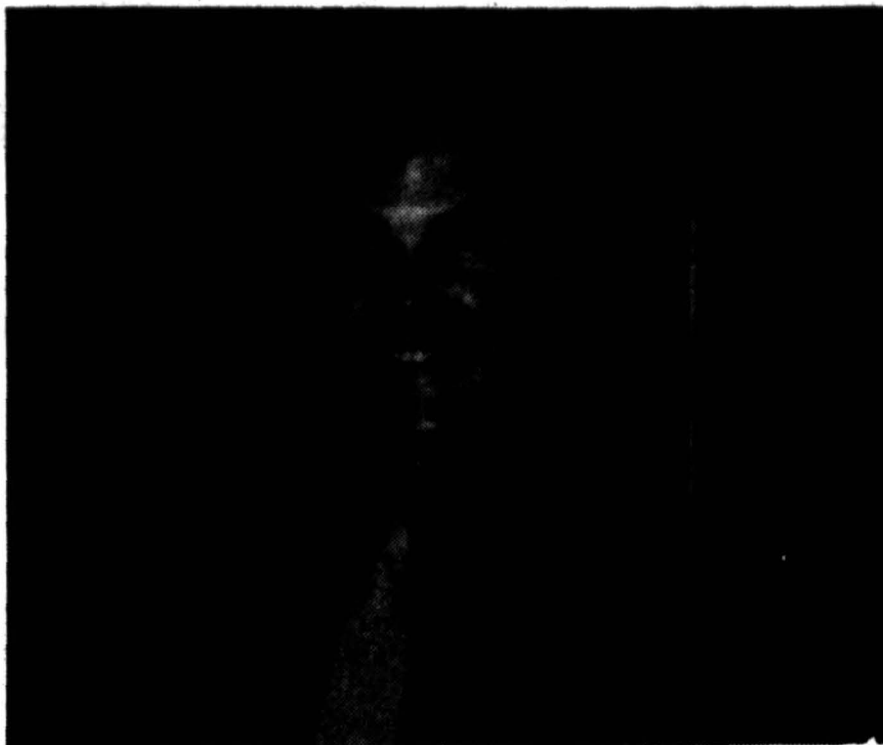

Eye to Eye With Wild Animals shows animals in unusual circumstances. Dogs are pictured serving as foster mothers to lions, tigers and panthers. As a result, these animals grow up with characteristics different from those inherent to their species. The immediate impact of the film is astonishment at the unusual, humorous and sometimes bizarre intermingling of unrelated species. It expands our notions of behavior modifications in animals.

William Shakespeare is shown as a sensitive writer profoundly influenced by his surroundings in Shakespeare of Stratford and London. Several scenes of 16th century London leave an indelible impression on viewers.

Bring a brown bag lunch to the Sunset Center terrace at noon. If the weather is inclement, lunch will be in the Chapman Room. Sunset Center will provide free coffee.

The films will screen at 1 p.m. in Leonard Carpenter Hall. Admission is free. For more information, phone 624-3996.

New mobile equine vet service opens

Dr. Kent Fowler, D.V.M., has announced the opening of his private practice effective May 15. Peninsula Equine Veterinary Service will be a mobile large animal veterinary unit serving horse and livestock owners throughout the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas. Dr. Fowler's new mobile unit includes portable X-ray equipment and refrigeration. Inpatient surgical cases will be handled at a centrally-located facility.

A native of Salinas, Fowler was graduated from Salinas High School and UC, Davis in 1977 with a degree in veterinary medicine. Since then, he has been associated with the Large Animal Veterinary Service in Salinas.

Among the innovations he hopes to bring to his practice will be quarterly educational seminars offering updates on equine medicine. Dr. Fowler plans the first for August on Equine Internal Parasites — A Losing Battle?

As a service to regular clients, he will also offer vaccinations and deworming for dogs and cats. Prompt 24-hour emergency treatment will be available for large animals.

Dr. Fowler lives in Salinas with his wife, Cindy, and their 10-month-old son, Joshua Kent. Mrs. Fowler anticipates lending her talents to the new equine service as "head go-fer."

Suit your pet to your personality

By JUDITH A. EISNER

LOVE IS a golden retriever," someone said the other day as we were comparing notes on the behavior patterns of this breed. It got us to thinking about just how much love a dog or cat is capable of giving and, on the other hand, how much love the owner in question wants.

This particular golden retriever exhibits many of the personality traits of the breed common to most goldens. "He's always got something in his mouth," his owner said, "and one of his insatiable delights is shredding and wadding up paper — tissues, towels, napkins — and then bringing them to you, tail wagging, all a-grin, as a love offering. Nothing dissuades him; you can't convince him that you're really not thrilled with the gift."

"He fell in love with my red slippers and kept pushing open the closet door to get at them until I finally gave them to him. Now he carries them around with him — not chewing, just holding them — and sleeps with one as a pillow for his head."

This sort of oral behavior is typical of golden retrievers, as any reader who owns one is sure to attest. So is the uncontrollable love for water — whether to swim in, play with or drink.

But not only golden retrievers by any means exhibit the kind of human-oriented personality that can make them either an ideal pet or an insufferable pest.

Many people really want a dog or cat who is primarily a self-sufficient creature with a world and life of its own. They think of pets as a nice thing to have around, but not as a constant, demanding companion.

For these people, there are many dogs and cats who are independent and undemanding by nature; who are more interested in pursuing their doggy or catty ways than nuzzling human hands for petting. Irish setters, for example, or beagles, or any of the big gaze hounds like Afghans or salukis, and most terriers still believe they're dogs first and pets second. For people who both want to own a dog and still be left alone, they make wonderful choices.

WE KNOW FOLKS who have purchased Siamese or Burmese or Abyssinian cats because they liked their aesthetics and who were very disappointed because "the cat won't leave us alone." Yet, one of the charms of these particular breeds is that they seem to genuinely love humans and their company.

Normal behavior for these cats is to follow their favorite human all around the house, getting underfoot, getting in the way of bed-making or garden chores and even perching on the edge of the tub, supervising a bath. They prefer laps to solitary chairs, as do many other cats, and vocalize their desires loudly.

In fact, we are frequently saddened but amazed to hear complaints from Siamese or Burmese owners that their cats are so outspoken. Anyone who contemplates purchase of either of these wonderful breeds ought to be informed that the cats rarely shut up and that their strange, exotic vocal sounds are part of their charm. All the owner needs to do is learn to interpret the commands!

Similarly, people who have not been forewarned as to the likely temperament of a puppy are sometimes disappointed when the dog matures and still longs for great amounts of affection. They apparently expected that once it grew up, it would go its own way and leave them in peace! (There's a similarity here, isn't there, between puppies and children? A child's need for love, attention and support doesn't end because he reaches 18 and becomes an "adult.")

There is a common saying among breeders of the more "humanized" breeds that "you can't lock them in a cage and forget them." And it's true. These animals suffer greatly when not given enough love and attention — and discipline; they lose their sparkle; they seem to withdraw into themselves and sulk. And, frequently, they become intentionally destructive as a direct result of their boredom and loneliness.

This sort of dependence on human company and attention has nothing to do with the size of the dog. Pugs, Pekes and Pomeranians (all Toy Group breeds) are far less likely to demand the quantities of attention that a German shepherd, collie or Doberman pinscher will.

One of the things, we believe, that makes a dog dependent or independent may be the purpose for which he originally was bred. Any of the breeds that work closely with man — that is, the Working Group dogs and less frequently the Sporting dogs — seem to require deeper communication with their masters than dogs bred primarily to trail or catch game. An analogy is that the retriever happily brings back game his master has shot; the hound goes out and actually catches it himself. Only through training does he refrain from keeping and eating it as his own.

Again, protective breeds, and these include both herders of cattle and sheep or defenders of property and life — the collie breeds and any dog with "shepherd" attached to his name, for example — are happiest in the companionship of man and, most significant, when working for them. No matter how many generations have elapsed since these breeds originated, the instinct to work remains. Watch a collie "herd" children — or ducks, for that matter — and you'll understand. It's parallel to the golden retriever bringing you socks and slippers.

It is difficult and time-consuming to create jobs for our dogs. But now and then you'll see one carrying a paper sack home from the grocery or a newspaper in from the road, and there's a swagger to that dog's bearing that few canines can boast. It's also true that the Guide and Seeing Eye dogs, the search-and-rescue dogs, the police patrol dogs and all the other canines in actual service are unquestionably the most fulfilled of all dogs. An at-home variation on the theme are the dogs trained in obedience work, whether for work or show. They've got something to do!

FOR MANY PEOPLE busy with careers and families, the ideal sort of pet is one who is around without being demonstrative. They like the idea of having a dog curled at their feet or in front of the hearth, or a cat napping on the sofa, but don't want to be actively involved with the animal. They prefer a pet who can keep itself occupied and one that doesn't go to pieces when left for the day — or boarded for a month.

To others, much of the joy of pet ownership is the reciprocal affection that flows between owner and pet. What good is it, they ask, to have a pet that hardly cares if you exist, or who treats all humans with equal coolness. The special rapport that develops between the right pet and the right owner is a beautiful thing to share and to behold.

Structural Pest Control

A service of the Carmel Board of Realtors
 Consumer Protection Committee

•“It's a new home. Why should I pay $75 for a termite report?”

•“I'm remodeling the house. Why should I . . .?”

Both questions represent extreme but common reluctance to spend not just $75 for a termite inspection, but potentially hundreds of dollars for corrective work. Why ask for trouble and unknown charges, when the purchase of a home already represents perhaps hundreds of thousands of dollars? The answer is: prudence and reasonable care. Lumber that comes from the lumberyard may have termites or beetles. An older home may need work to eliminate conditions that lead to termites, beetles or dry rot.

The structural pest control report is commonly called a termite report, and covers areas of a structure open and visible. The inspector does not rip out walls or even check under the carpets or furniture, but he does thump, crawl and poke to find those insects and plants that subsist on wood, paper and water. From the termite report comes a list of conditions he finds, separated into corrective and conducive categories.

By law, corrective items must be cured before the termite company can certify the structure as clear of wood-destroying organisms. Corrective items are normally wood damage or evidence of the existence of pest. Conducive items might be water or wet soil under the house, earth in contact with wood attached to the structure, or poor drainage.

Locally, most damage is caused by three types of termites — drywoods (the kind you see swarming on warm days), dampwoods, and subterraneans. A different kind of damage is caused by fungus dry rot. But whether termites or dry rot, moisture is essential for their continued existence. Cure for each type of problem requires an expert. Therein lies one of the major problems for the pest control industry.

Inspections and clearances must be issued by a licensed firm, but few firms can survive on inspection charges alone. A major portion of their income is therefore derived from curing the infestations. The State Structural Pest Control Board continuously checks on the activities of licensed firms, even to the point recently of conducting its own “sting” operation. Much of the work for providing clearance must be done by the firm issuing the clearance, for the work involves the use of deadly chemicals for which licensure is required. But must of the other work could be handled by a licensed contractor. The problem for many consumers is how to distinguish between work for which a license is required, and work that could be put out to bid.

In deciding which pest control firm to hire for the inspection and clearance, look for willingness to help in solving problems or complaints, membership in a national or state organization requiring at least two years of responsible experience as a requirement of membership, recognition as being technically qualified with a reputation for integrity, competency and responsibility. Look for a firm willing to specify work that must be done by the licensed termite company and work that may be put to bid. Remember that the certifying firm will want to reinspect the work and will be entitled to a reinspection fee.

If you are not satisfied with a firm's work, call the firm that did the work. Do not immediately hire someone else to fix it. Termite companies welcome the chance to correct legitimate errors, but cannot accept responsibility for work done by non-licensed people. If the response you get is unsatisfactory, contact the local Board of Realtors Consumer Protection Committee or Better Business Bureau for referral to an appropriate source of help.

For a home of my quality, a modest $239,000 is a bargain, with a long-term assumable loan, plus my present owners will help finance my sale. I just can't understand why they're so anxious to sell me. Please call soon to "come up and see me see me sometime."

Haunted Castle?

This incredible place may not really be haunted (we saw no traces of ghosts, though Banquo might find it familiar), but once you've seen it, it will haunt you. The views—of Carmel Bay, Pebble Beach Links, Carmel Beach, Carmel Point, the Fish Ranch, Monastery and Pt. Lobos clear past the Highlands—make it the finest vantage point in all of Pebble Beach. Five acres of natural wonderland just off Del Ciervo, as primitive today as it was before Father Serra.

Well, not quite. Back in the 20's, more than 60 years ago, the Crocker family built "Villa Amici," a 6900 sq. ft. mansion of imposing dimensions, on this site. The circular drive, overgrown now with trees and vines, can still be traced. The massive front terrace, with grasses growing between its stones, still looks over the broad views and the near slopes where borders mark once lovely beds and gardens.

The great ballroom, 40 feet long with fireplaces at either end, still echoes with the sounds of grand parties, and peers through high broken windows at the timeless vistas. Upstairs a long front hallway moves past 5 bedrooms and 5 baths and a fireplace nook, all in disrepair. The front courtyard, with twin stairways mounting to a massive door, is there. And the servants' quarters—bedrooms, baths, kitchens, pantries, wine cellars—all can still be seen.

Only the gatehouse, small by comparison, is now functional. But close examination by architects has proved that the old Villa is structurally sound and properly designed for its unique setting. There is not another opportunity like this anywhere in Pebble Beach. You'll make many changes, no doubt, but this is a solid shell in a matchless place that deserves the effort it will require of you. It can be The Showplace of Monterey Peninsula. $2,750,000.
